New Tariff.
Cheaper Diamonds, Pearls.
Power, More of It,
Higher Speed, On Water.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

"That means the election of a Democrat in 1932."

It depends on the nomination. Some things are more important to voters than the tariff.

FARMERS LOOKING through the increased rates will find an effort to help them, adding a hundred per cent to the duty on cream, increasing heavily duties on other agricultural products.

SOME WILL BE GLAD to hear that the duty on pearls and diamonds has been cut in two.

This is done not to oblige those that want jewelry, but to diminish smuggling, by making it less profitable.

IMPORTANT to the human race are physical power, and mental power. Mental power has stood still for about two thousand years. Physical power is constantly increasing.

A German has found a way to increase the power of engines, gasoline, Diesel or steam, from 20 to 60 per cent, his new kind of turbine using the power of exhaust gases.

LUFTHANSA, great German air company, has ordered a Diesel engine built on the new plan, for airplane experiment. Fuel oil will be used.

Germany leads the world in mechanical invention, and in chemistry.

PROF. CLAUDE, one of the world's most distinguished physicians, informs the French Academy of Science that he is making progress in his effort to utilize power from the ocean.

A small fraction of the tide's power would make all other power unnecessary. The tides, once harnessed, would run our machinery as long as the sun and moon combine to raise and drop the waters of the ocean.

PROF. CLAUDE'S experiments use the warm water at the surface of tropical seas to operate a turbine, the water being converted to steam by means of a vacuum. Cold water from the depths of the sea is used to re-condense the steam, and renew the vacuum.

It is complicated for the non-scientific mind, but if there is "an inexhaustible store of power in tropical sea-water," that certainly will make a great difference to enormous populations living near the equator in comparative idleness.

THE DEATH of Sir Henry Segrave, brilliant, courageous Englishman, will be regretted everywhere.

He had developed new speeds in motorboats and automobiles, and was killed yesterday when a boat in which he was going 100 miles an hour turned over and sank.

MAJ. SEGRAVE had shown that man's speed afloat can be greatly increased. Nature supplies, in water, perfect, ball-bearing surface, the drops of water rolling one over the other, without friction.

New ideas are needed in ship construction, in screws, wheels, or other driving power.

BUDAPEST IS ENJOYING a congress of delegates from various nations opposed to prohibition. Sir William Arbuthnot Lane, distinguished British surgeon, says alcohol has made man kinder, pleasanter, better, easier to live with, and wine will be "enjoyed" as long as the race of man lasts.

He attributes our American crime wave to the Volstead act, pointing out that crime in Europe, with no prohibition, is steadily decreasing.

THE AMAZING THING is not that alcohol is "pleasant," but that, as a rule, nations and individuals that use no alcohol have not been among the most successful.

Examine an accepted list of the 1,000 greatest men in history. You will not find 10 teetotalers.

Among nations, you see 300,000,000 non-alcoholic Asiatics in India, easily held down by a small crowd of Englishmen, whom prohibition interests not in the least.

MR. LUCAS, federal trade commissioner, says purchasers of $29,000,000 worth of securities issued by the W B Foshay Company, of Delaware and Minnesota, will get exactly NOTHING.

Possibly somebody will go to jail.

WHAT ABOUT COMPANIES that, in the insane gambling period, issued and sold stocks in single companies up to 5, 6, 7 hundred million and more, outrageously watered, causing buyers to lose hundreds of millions, instead of $29,000,000? Will anything happen to them? They are wholesalers.

PAVING BID TRICKERY CHARGED

TARIFF EDGE OF 85 SEEN IN HOUSE

Passage Will Put Question To Hoover; His Approval Of Measure Anticipated

By WILLIAM S. NEAL,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Determined to relieve the nation of the depressing uncertainty of tariff legislation, the House today prepared to pass the "billion dollar" Hawley-Smoot tariff bill and lay it on President Hoover's doorstep Monday morning.

Taking no chances with a possible filibuster or delay through technicalities, Republican rulers of the House drafted an iron-clad rule which assured final vote before sunset.

The vote will come upon adoption of the unified conference report, accepted by the Senate by a 44 to 42 vote yesterday. The House majority was expected to be about 85, with some Western Republicans deserting the administration and some Southern Democrats voting for the bill.

SIGNATURE EXPECTED

President Hoover, it was said by administration leaders, will sign the bill, after referring it to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon who administers the tariff law, and receiving a favorable report. The Chief Executive is expected to make some reservations and resort to his flexible tariff powers to adjust it.

A final assault upon the bill was planned by Democrats, under the leadership of Representative John N. Garner, of Texas. Since the House has already approved the bulk of the rates, Garner was expected to direct his fire to the flexible tariff clauses, lumber, cement and sugar rates.

House leaders decided to permit three hours of debate, in addition

CAROL, HELEN REPORTED REUNITED

Queen Marie Responsible For Reconciliation; Plays On Love for Boy Prince

International News Service.

BUCHAREST, June 14.—King Carol II and his queen, Helen, were reunited today, according to the newspaper Lupta.

Helen, who had just been declared Queen of Rumania, joined Carol, Dowager Queen Marie and others of the royal family at a reunion dinner at Cotroceni Palace last night.

Queen Marie was an instrumental character in effecting the reconciliation. She persuaded Helen that her place was at Carol's side to aid in the press of state affairs and in other counsels.

The "Queen Mother of the Balkans" succeeded in getting Carol and Helen together for conference at Cotroceni Palace and the two famous royal divorcees became one again.

Crown Prince Michael, once king regardless of the parliamentary rule put into effect which declared Carol "king in escrow" during the years of the latter's exile, was the binding tie that finally decided the reconciliation.

The entire Rumanian nation was happy over the event. Despite Carol's amours, the populace always has adored the errant sovereign. Helen is an equally popular figure.

Dr. Juliu Maniu, Peasant party leader, aided Carol in the affairs of state by drawing up and forming a coalition cabinet, of which he was made premier by King

AWARDS FOR BRICK HELD UNFAIR

'Frozen-Out' Competitors Say County Contract Was Awarded by Favoritism

Paving brick and the procedure in handling public contracts involving its use may furnish an interesting series of developments, it was indicated with these revelations today:

1—County Commissioner C. C. McGovern charged that favoritism, made possible by a trick county specification, was costing the county an extra $60,000 for the construction of the Ohio River boulevard.

2—W. A. Bonitz, whose brick company, it was implied, was one of the two companies favored by a discriminatory state specification, admitted that to meet the state specification on some state jobs it was at least necessary that bricks used be manufactured by members of the National Paving Brick Association. Bonitz is its president.

3—Director Norman F. Brown, of the County Department of Public Works, was hazy as to the extent to which the questioned specifications calling for patented brick might affect the numbers of those eligible to bid on contracts.

4—Independent brick makers were preparing evidence designed to prove discrimination in state and county road projects.

Hints that Bonitz was to be favored by public officials in the letting of road-building contracts, are seen in Gov Fisher's action ordering a hearing Tuesday before State Highway Secretary James L. Stuart on the bidding for two Allegheny County projects.

"EXCLUSIVE"

Specifications for the two jobs on State Route No. 120 call for patented bricks, it was said, that can be made only by the Bonitz company and one other concern. Costs of the projects are to be shared equally by the state and Allegheny County.

2 HELD AS FAZIO BEER AIDES

Two alleged beer-racket accomplices of Philip Fazio, who was acquitted yesterday of a murder charge in the barrel-murder mystery, were taken into custody early today. Arrest of another man is expected shortly.

Fazio was to be arraigned today before Alderman George Anderson to give bail on a charge of violating the Snyder act. His alleged accomplices will be arraigned when they succeed in raising bail.

The two men arrested today were Jacob Blazkovec, alias Jacob Bloch, of 749 Brookline boulevard, said to have been Fazio's brewmaster, and John Winning, alias John Boots, of Turtle Creek.

Chief of County Detectives George W. Murren today complimented Detectives Frank Ritz, Frank Malone, Samuel Whisner and Thomas Calig for their work in the barrel murder mystery.

Murren told them not to be "disheartened" on account of the verdict acquitting Fazio.

Fazio was found not guilty of slaying William J. Gregory, whose headless body was found in a barrel in Penn township.

Davis to Deliver Flag Day Address

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, Republican nominee for senator, was in town today to deliver a Flag Day address this afternoon in East Park, North Side, under the auspices of Allegheny County Elks. At 4 o'clock he was to review the parade in Brentwood marking the close of the state firemen's convention. When asked about the tariff bill, Secretary Davis said:

"It isn't all there is to be desired, but it is the best we could get."

Davis leaves for Washington tonight.

Aimee Back From Trip to Holy Land

NEW YORK, June 14.—(AP.)—Aimee Semple McPherson, California evangelist, returned on the North German Lloyd liner Europa last night from a pilgrimage to the Holy land.

SELECT G. O. P. CHIEFS TODAY

Republican party officers for the city and county were to be elected this afternoon at a meeting of the committeemen and women in North Side Carnegie Music Hall. Indications are there will be a change in leadership in the city organization.

State Senator James J. Coyne is reported to have declined another term as chairman of the city committee. Traffic Court Magistrate William J. Soost, of the Eleventh Ward, is being mentioned as Coyne's successor. Mrs. Lillian Morgart is mentioned as the candidate for vice chairman of the city committee, the office now held by Mrs. W. W. Robinson, of the Eleventh Ward.

In the county it is generally predicted that County Commissioner Joseph O. Armstrong will be returned as chairman.

BLUE LAW FOES HOLD GAINS

Ben Avon, Blawnox and Brentwood, three boroughs geographically distant, favor repeal of the Pennsylvania Blue Laws by their returns in the poll of Allegheny County by the Sun-Telegraph. The count thus far in Ben Avon is very close, while Blawnox voters cast more than two votes for repeal to one for enforcement and the Brentwood ratio for repeal is better than six-to-one. The totals are:

	Ben Avon	Blawnox	Brentwood
For Blue Laws	69	31	23
For Modification	25	5	16
For Repeal	71	72	148

The number of ballots cast in the poll by the three boroughs, 465, represents about 30 per cent of the total vote, 1,612, cast by the voters in the recent primary election. Nearly one-third of the votes in the poll in the three boroughs to date were cast by women voters.

The number of votes in the poll from the county reaches 44,048 with the latest tabulation, divided as follows:

	Men	Women	Total
For Blue Laws	3,693	3,097	6,790
For Repeal	22,826	11,173	34,009

The general ratio is about 5.1 votes for repeal to each vote for enforcement, with 77 per cent of the total favoring repeal, 15 per cent favoring enforcement and 8 per cent favoring modification.

Darrow Sees U. S. Made Cruel by Prohibition

CHICAGO, June 14.—(Universal.)—Clarence S. Darrow, noted criminal lawyer, addressing the Chicago Press Club last night, declared that prohibition is developing in America a national trait which loves to inflict and witness cruelty.

Gangland's atrocities, he said, will continue until the nation becomes weak and submissive or indignantly tears prohibition from the statute books.

He continued:

"If all the bootleggers were killed today, there would be a new crop tomorrow. The prohibition evil lies deeper than that."

GOSLIN TRADED TO BROWNS

ST. LOUIS, June 14.—(AP.)—Leon (Goose) Goslin, hard-hitting outfielder of the Washington Senators, has been traded to the St. Louis Browns for Heinie Manush, outfielder, and Alvin Crowder, a pitcher. According to Bill Freil, Browns' business manager, the deal was a straight player trade with no cash involved.

AMERICA LEADS AS HELEN WINS

By F. A. WRAY,
International News Service.

WIMBLEDON, Eng., June 14.—America swung into the lead in the Wightman Cup matches here today when Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, coming out from behind in a spectacular affray, defeated Mrs. Phoebe Watson, of England, 7-5, 6-1, after Helen Jacobs had evened the match score by downing Joan Fry, 6-0, 6-3, in a walkover.

Mrs. Moody's victory, which climaxed one of the most stirring battles of her career, gave America 3 victories to England's 2.

With two matches more to be played, the Stars and Stripes had an even chance of being hauled aloft at this ancient citadel of tennis.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—(INS.)—President Hoover tonight will be the guest of honor at a banquet to be given by Brazilian Ambassador do Amaral, at which President-elect Prestes, of Brazil, also will be present.

Wales Takes Up Gliding For New Air Thrill

LONDON, June 14.—(INS.)—Aviation's latest thrill-gliding today had enlisted the Prince of Wales.

Gliding, to the expert flier, means the acme of all flying—riding the winds without anything to support the glider but a construction of wing and tail surfaces.

The next King of England likes to fly and in his flying he's interested in aerodynamics — in a word, the prince is keenly interested in the final theory of why any airplane does fly, so he has taken up the sport of gliding.

Today, near Lewes, he spent some time in receiving instructions from Col. Semper and from the Austrian record holder, Herr Kronfeld.

HOOVER DENIES NAVAL TREATY HARBORS HIDDEN SECRETS

DOCUMENTS KEPT FROM INQUIRY

President Refuses to Turn Over Confidential Data to Foreign Relations Quiz

WASHINGTON, June 14. (AP.) — President Hoover today stood sponsor for the statement that the London naval pact contains "not one scintilla of agreement or obligation of any character outside the treaty itself."

This assertion was regarded as having been evoked by the insistence of Senate opponents of ratification that the administration give the Foreign Relations Committee confidential documents having to do with the negotiation of the pact. Their request has been refused.

In further reply to this group the President said the Senate "through two of its members on the delegation has had a practical participation in every step of the making of the treaty."

"MINOR PART INVOLVED"

Analyzing the cruiser provision of the pact, Mr. Hoover said the opposition to these is based upon "a very small part of the fleet."

These assertions were contained in a statement issued by the President late yesterday. It was the second defense of the treaty to come from the administration in 24 hours. Secretary Stimson on Thursday night delivered a radio address appealing for prompt ratification.

"NAVAL RACE ISSUE"

"The real issue in the treaty," Mr. Hoover said, "is whether we shall stop competitive naval building with all the destruction and dangers to international goodwill which continuation on these courses implies."

He pointed out that the treaty provides for "parity of our battleship fleets almost at once instead of 10 years hence." This he said, will be accomplished without building a single new ship.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which has the treaty under consideration, was in recess for the week-end. Chairman Borah will call the members together for action on Monday.

STIMSON REBUFFS BORAH

WASHINGTON, June 14. — (Universal.)—In a sharp letter, Secretary of State Stimson has again refused to give the Senate Foreign Relations Committee the pertinent secret documents relating to the London Naval Treaty.

His reply to the committee's resolution asserting its full rights to the documents was addressed to Chairman Borah. It slammed the door against the committee's demand for the full facts pertaining to the London negotiations.

DAWES FOR TREATY

NEW YORK, June 14.—(INS.)—Charles G. Dawes, ambassador to the Court of St. James, was in the city today, home for a month vacation, after being delayed 14 hours aboard the liner Acquitania by fog.

Ambassador Dawes expressed confidence in the naval treaty, calling it "one of the greatest steps ever taken toward naval reduction and limitation." He would not make a statement on the passing of the tariff bill.

Radio Entertainers Sued for $150,000

CLEVELAND, June 14.—(AP.)—Gene Carroll and Glenn Rowland, commonly known as Gene and Glenn, the originators of Jake and Lena at station WTAM, here, have been sued for $150,000 by the Maybeth Chemical Company, Cleveland cosmetic manufacturers, for alleged breach of verbal contract.

The plaintiff alleges the team agreed to advertise the company's products, beginning September 1, but is bound by another contract, which prevents execution of the agreement.

Fall Proves Fatal To Heroic Fireman

WASHINGTON, June 14. — (AP.)—Acting Deputy Chief Peter R. Davis, who was injured in a spectacular fire, died at Emergency Hospital of internal injuries and a crushed back. His injuries had not been considered serious.

Davis was one of four firemen who fell nearly three stories when a ladder gave way under them after a blaze in a five-story building had been brought under control.

LUZERNE VOTE O. K. AWAITED

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., June 14. — (INS.) — Certification by the county commissioners of the election returns of Luzerne County for the May 20 primary was expected today or Monday, following the decision of the court en banc yesterday that perforation of ballots was not violation of the primary election act.

The decision marks another step in the legal battle which has waged over the Luzerne vote since election.

Charges were brought by attorneys for Francis Shunk Brown, apparently defeated Republican gubernatorial nominee, that perforation of the ballots invalidated them.

Should they have been successful in having the vote thrown out the Republican nomination would be lost by Gifford Pinchot to Brown, for without the unofficial majority of 26,000 in Luzerne County, Pinchot trailed Brown by 6,494 votes.

The court stated that a majority of the five judges concurred, but reserved the right to file dissenting opinions.

TORNADO KILLS 5 IN WEST

EAU CLAIRE, Wis., June 14.—(INS.)—Four persons were killed and 12 injured when a twister hit Menomonie, Wis., 24 miles west of here last night. The dead are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wolbert, a woman identified as a Mrs. Kaiser and an unidentified man.

The Dells Lumber Company sawmill was demolished and the roof of the Beauregard Hotel was hurled against the Security State Bank. The property damage was estimated at $400,000.

In Southern Wisconsin tornadoes did a similar property damage and one man was reported to have been killed.

RECONCILIATION IN RUMANIA

Carol. Carol approved of his cabinet succession.

MME. LUPESCU RETURNED

LONDON, June 14.—(AP.)—A dispatch to the London Daily Mail from Berne, Switzerland, today said that Mme. Lupescu was en route to Bucharest in the charge of two trustworthy Rumanian officers, both friends of King Carol.

Shortly before Carol started for Bucharest to reclaim the crown worn by his father and son, the dispatch said, he went to Mme. Lupescu and informed her that the interests of the Rumanian state made it imperative that he return there.

Mme. Lupescu approached him timidly, and then throwing her arms around his neck, sobbed her resignation and a wish to be remembered in his thoughts always.

"I know you must go, but when you are back in Bucharest you'll forget me, as you have forgotten the others."

NEVER FORGET

The king-to-be answered her with a vow that he would never forget her, and promised an arrangement whereby she would return to Rumania and would be always provided for.

Intimate details of the Rumanian situation at the time of Carol's coup d'etat were revealed by Barbu Jonescu, wealthy Rumanian, who was a friend of Carol in exile. M. Jonescu declared that at the time of Carol's coup the Liberals in Rumania were offering the throne to Prince Charles of Belgium, second son of King Albert.

The measure was expected to receive House approval, with Republicans declaring it will bring prosperity to the nation, and the Democrats charging it will aid only the privileged few of "big business."

SUPPORTS WATSON VIEW

The prediction of Senator Watson of Indiana, Republican leader of the Senate, that passage of the bill will bring "better times" in 30 days and prosperity within a year, was indorsed by many House leaders.

Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, majority leader, said:

"I think the end of uncertainty over the tariff bill will aid business. The delay in final action has been criminal."

Representative Crowther (Rep.) of New York, said:

"I believe passage of the bill will revive activities almost immediately, because uncertainty which has prevented business from making plans will be ended. A spirit of general confidence will result."

ATTACKED BY DEMOCRAT

Representative Crisp (Dem.), of Georgia, a member, like Crowther, of the Ways and Means Committee, said:

"In my judgment this is the worst tariff bill ever enacted by Congress, and it will have a disastrous economic effect.

"It is an attempt to plug up all the holes where any competitive manufactured articles enter the country. It means imports will be limited to agricultural products and to noncompetitive articles like rubber, silk and spices. I think it will interfere with our foreign trade and will hurt the farmer."

Shouse Calls Tariff Bill G. O. P. Blunder

WASHINGTON, June 14. — (Universal.)—Following the Senate's approval of the tariff conference report, Jouett Shouse, chairman of the Democratic National Executive Committee, issued a statement, declaring:

"Friday's legislative incident does not alter the circumstance that the bill is an economic crime, a political blunder by the party that jammed it through, a monument to the incapacity of President Hoover to lead his party and a demonstration of the ineptness of his administration."

SAINT-GAUDENS BACK IN U. S.

NEW YORK, June 14.—Homer Saint-Gaudens, director of fine arts of Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh, was back in the United States today after four months' visit in Europe, where he gathered paintings for the Carnegie Institute International, which will open in Pittsburgh next October. He selected some 300 paintings from 14 European nations. For the first time since 1914 the international will have paintings direct from Russia.

Upon his arrival here yesterday, Mr. Saint-Gaudens said that the art of painting is assuming its true function as an expression of contemporary social life and is freeing itself from the convulsive revolutionary movements of the last 20 years. He reported finding European art ruled by youth and that a few of the older artists were still holding their own.

TRICK CHARGED IN AWARD OF PAVING JOBS

Westinghouse Bridge in Turtle Creek toward East McKeesport. A low bid of $827,686 was submitted by Michael Parish, Inc., of Pittsburgh. The most expensive part of the improvement is grading and filling.

The other project is the reconstruction of Ardmore boulevard ending near the west approach of George Westinghouse Bridge for which a low bid of $302,221 was submitted by the McCrady Construction Company of Braddock.

The bidding contractors have nothing to do with the selection of brick as they must furnish the article required by the specifications.

Bids were opened Thursday, and Gov. Fisher ordered a thorough investigation when E. Lowry Humes, former U. S. District Attorney for Western Pennsylvania, who is said to represent brick manufacturing concerns, advised Gov. Fisher that his clients were excluded from the bidding because the specifications demanded a patented brick.

STANDARDS NOT MET

Independent manufacturers in their complaint to Gov. Fisher through Attorney Humes contend that the specifications for two sections of Routes No. 120 in Allegheny County are set up in conflict with the standards of the State Highway Department since 1926, and are at variance with the standard paving specifications announced by the National Paving Brick Manufacturers' Association in its circular of May, 1930.

In specifications presented to bidders on these jobs it is stated in an amending clause:

"On this project the brick used in the wearing surface shall be wire-cut-lug fire clay brick three and one-half inches in depth, otherwise complying with the general specifications of the State Highway Department."

MADE UNDER PATENT

Objectors contend that these brick are made under a patent held exclusively by the Bonitz company and the Toronto Fire Clay Company.

According to the complainants, all contracts hitherto have been placed in accordance with specifications in effect to April, 1930, which were as follows:

"Form 408—Standard specifications of the Highway Department; section 235, BRICK—Vitrified brick shall meet the following requirements:

"Quality: These brick shall be repressed or wire-cut-lug or plain wire-cut brick with lugs thoroughly annealed, tough, durable, non-absorptive and evenly burned. When broken they shall show a dense stone-like body, free from lime, air-pockets, cracks or marked laminations," etc.

M'GOVERN BACKS PROTEST

County Commissioner McGovern, who concurs in the objectors' complaint, said last night that the so-called patented brick has been specified for the Ohio River boulevard at a cost $60,000 higher than if brick meeting former specifications had been permitted.

He declared the amended clause in the specifications compelled the use of bricks costing $8.60 a thousand more than the brick would have cost had the change not been authorized, and as far as he knew, the change was not made at a regular meeting of the County Commissioners.

Director Norman F. Brown, of the county Department of Public Works, said the protested amending clause was not added at the request of Allegheny County officials, but was a standard feature of state, county and city specifications. He believed a number of manufacturers were permitted to make the patented brick.

"TOMMYROT"

Bonitz, who aroused interest lately by contributing $96,000 to the Brown-Davis campaign fund, made the following statement via telephone from Atlantic City:

"The assertion that specifications for these two highway jobs were sewed up to favor the Crescent Brick Company is all tommyrot. There is no reason to prevent any brick manufacturer east of the Mississippi River from making a product of the identical standard required. The Dunn patent under which the wire-cut-lug brick are made may be licensed to any member of the National Paving Brick Association.

"One manufacturer withdrew from the association and he cannot obtain a lease on the patent unless he comes back. I do not know whether he is behind the complaint which has been made to Gov. Fisher. The fact that a brick of three and one-half inches in depth has been specified is a matter for the road engineers to discuss. It is probable that they require a product to withstand the strain of heavy truck haulage. Any manufacturer can turn out a three and one-half-inch brick as readily as a three-inch or a four-inch brick.

The brick at the left is that made by independent manufacturers and that at the right the one made by association members, few in number, using a patented process in manufacture. Trick county and state specifications require the patent brick for roads.

MORE AIRING OF CANNON DEALS DUE

Norris Delves Into Report Of Commutation Being Granted Kable & Co. Man

By EDWARD L. RODDAN, Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, June 14. —Although apparently victorious in his battle with the Senate Lobby Committee, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of Virginia, faced difficulties that appeared far from ended today.

It was learned Senator Norris (Rep.), of Nebraska, is planning to introduce a resolution Monday asking the Justice Department to furnish the Senate with all papers in the case of Harry L. Goldhurst, New York, former bucket shop proprietor now serving five years in Atlanta Penitentiary.

Goldhurst was prime mover in the defunct firm of Kable & Co., with which Bishop Cannon dealt in his stock trading activities.

WANTS LIGHT ON SENTENCE

The purpose of the proposed Norris resolution is to find out if the Goldhurst sentence has been reduced, and if so, upon whose recommendation.

The fact Bishop Cannon was a heavy trader with Kable & Co. was revealed with publication yesterday of the correspondence between him and the firm, which created unusual interest at the capital.

In some quarters it was looked upon as throwing an entirely new light upon Bishop Cannon's stock market activities. It disclosed the bishop apparently lost heavily in his trading.

SENATE TO GET RECORD

Although the Lobby Committee attempted to absolve him of contempt of the Senate, the record of his testimony, including his refusal to answer questions about his fight against Al Smith in 1928, will be reported to the Senate next week.

Senator Blaine (Rep.), of Wisconsin, takes the view that under the law the Vice President is required to lay this record before the district attorney for grand jury consideration. Vice President Curtis has given no indication of how he will rule.

Pending this ruling, Blaine will make no statement as to what he will do. It was practically assured, however, that the Senate itself will make no effort to cite the bishop for contempt.

CLUB BUSINESS ISSUE BALKED

DENVER, June 14.—(AP.)—Repercussion of attempts to bring before the twentieth biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs a resolution condemning "commercialization" of the organization's name, was felt when Mrs. J. Allan Hoover, delegates, of Govans, Baltimore, Md., said officials had discouraged any move of that nature on her part.

Mrs. Howard D. Bennett, Baltimore, who is not an accredited delegate but who, as a member of the Baltimore District Federation, was working with Mrs. Hoover on the question of such a resolution, said that Federation officials had used "steam roller" tactics in preventing introduction of the subject.

The resolution, passed at a meeting of the executive committee of the Baltimore District of the Federation, and sent to Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, Maryland Federation president, and Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, Brockton, Mass., first vice president of the Federation, was presumed to have been aimed at Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, associate director of public relations for American movie producers.

WOMAN STRUCK BY BURGLAR

A man who struck Mrs. Rose Meyers, of 1924 Chateau street, on the head with a cup while she lay asleep in bed, was being sought today by Woods Run police.

Mrs. Meyers, confined to bed for two weeks with a fractured right ankle, was asleep on the first floor when slugged.

The assailant's wild stare led Mrs. Meyers to believe he was a dope addict. He fled as she screamed.

By AL GOUGH

(Editor's note—Mr. Gough covered the recent Ohio State Penitentiary disorders, familiarizing himself with penal problems and prison life generally, his exclusive stories and interviews with notorious convicts appearing in the Sun-Telegraph at the time.)

Dunc Morgan was a "bad" man—a hardened yegg!

Dean Ward Kent was a personable young man of family and social prestige!

These two are brought together in the narrow confines of a prison cell in "The Big House" by Jack Lait in his latest serial of that name, which begins Monday in The Sun-Telegraph.

It was the same problem—overcrowding of convicts and the herding together of first offenders and professional criminals — that I found to exist within the antiquated walls of the Ohio State Penitentiary. And, this same condition kindled the fire of hatred and riot which spread through the institution overnight after the disastrous fire which claimed the lives of 322 inmates.

"The Big House" is a graphic story of prison life—full of the horror, intrigue and hopelessness of life behind the insurmountable barriers of stone and steel which society has built up around those whose deeds have made them outcasts.

It is not a sordid tale of crime, nor is it an imaginary romance—but a truthful and purposeful page from life behind the scenes, intensely interesting and realistic.

Dunc Morgan and his convict fellows are typical of the men thrust upon the care of the state and forgotten by the society which has chosen to make them pay for their misdeeds. There are thousands of Dean Ward Kent's in and out of prisons.

They are not criminals, but soon become desperate and hardened by the association thrust upon them.

Even the love of a good woman will not counterbalance the evil influences of bread and water punishment, solitary confinement and sundry other forms of brutality brandished over the heads of unfortunate inmates by ruthless guards and warden hardened by the "pinch-penny" policies of state politics.

Enter into "The Big House" with Mr. Lait in this his latest and most graphic story and bear with these unfortunates who lose everything — their identity and even self respect—in a life of crime forced upon them by the unmerciful demands of society and a blind justice.

ARRANGE RITES FOR M'NEIRNEY

Funeral services for Col. Hemingway McNeirney, 57, well known sportsman and a life-long Pittsburgher, will be held Monday morning in St. Bede's Catholic Church. Burial will be private. Col. McNeirney died yesterday in his home at 500 South Lang avenue, following a brief illness. For more than 30 years the colonel has been a familiar figure at race tracks throughout the country. He carried a cane a gift of John McGraw, manager of the New York Giants. It bore the inscription, "To Colonel John Hemingway, a real pal and sport." He was known by many who frequented the race tracks as "Glouch Gloucester Red," a nickname given him at a race track in New Jersey many years ago. To the majority, however, he was known as "The Colonel."

Col. McNeirney was born in the Eighteenth ward where his father was named the first squire of the district. He became interested in sports and soon was seen umpiring baseball games throughout the city. When still young he became a professional umpire and joined the old O. and P. League. His powerful voice earned him the name of "Fog Horn" McNeirney. McNeirney is survived by his mother, Mrs. Catherine McNeirney with whom he made his home.

TRAFFIC CHIEFS EYE RATE FIGHT

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 14.—Traffic managers of district steel companies and other executives are keenly interested in the fight being waged by Pittsburgh and Chicago industries for more equitable freight rates. It is pointed out that very small differences in freight charges per hundred weight will produce substantially higher freight bills.

For instance, a one-cent difference in freight rates on a 500-ton order of sheets, means an increase of $100 in the freight haul, and a two-cent advance an increase of $200. The new short haul schedule recently placed in effect on shipments from Youngstown to Cleveland amounts to four cents per cwt., or $400 on a 500-ton order.

The Pittsburgh rate, to consumers in Youngstown was increased one and half cents or $150 on a 500-ton award.

"But say, where is Miss Ruth Mix, your—er, bride?"

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Miss Browne Added to Bud List

This eventful month of June is rivaling the gayest weeks of the winter season in variety and charm of social events. Debutantes are bowing to the social world, brides are pronouncing solemn vows and the school set is enjoying informal entertainments after weeks of school regime.

The "little season" for the buds will be particularly attractive this year. And more and more entertainments are being planned in their honor before folks leave for summer homes in mid-July.

The latest addition I know of to the debutante list is Hester Harton Browne, daughter of the Richard Hollyday Semples, of Louisville, Ky., and Sewickley. Hester and her family are expected in Sewickley in time for the debutante events.

On July 3 Dr. and Mrs. Robert Milligan will give a dinner dance for Hester in the Allegheny Country Club.

Home weddings, church weddings, big weddings, little weddings, and all in the month of June. And so what more appropriate than a wedding can I tell you of this morning? The very atmosphere has the scent of bridal roses and the faint echo of wedding chimes. And now I'll tell you about a wedding that took place yesterday in New Canaan, Conn. And a Sewickley girl, Elizabeth Liggett, was one of the bridesmaids.

The bride was Katherine Jones, daughter of the Arthur Bacon Joneses, of Park avenue and Valley road, New Canaan, and she became the bride of Edgar Park Baker, son of the Vernon Bell Bakers, of New York and Cliff Ridge road, New Canaan. The ceremony took place in the afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the Congregational Church with the Rev. Merrul P. Clarke, rector, officiating. And after the service there was a reception in the home of the bride's parents.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of point d'esprit lace over satin, made quaintly with puff sleeves, and a long, bouffant skirt. Her tulle veil fell from a cap-effect arranged with clusters of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Quaint Gown

Katherine H. Russell, of Detroit, was the maid of honor, and the matron of honor, Mrs. Elmer I. Phillips, of Englewood, N. J., and the bridesmaids besides Elizabeth, were Evelyn Mower, of Boston, Mass., Edith Tyler, of Plainfield, N. J., and Mrs. Charles Stedman, of New York. They all wore sleeves frocks of pale yellow organdie with large berths collars and long, full skirts. They wore large straw picture hats to match their frocks, which were trimmed with streamers of natier blue velvet ribbon. And they all carried bouquets of blue delphinium and African and yellow daisies.

William L. Moery, of Buffalo, was the best man and the ushers included the bride's brother, L. Irwin Jones, Charles S. Haight, Jr., William L. King, Jr., and Richard M. Brett, of New York; Warren E. Hoagland, of Kansas City, Mo.; Charles N. Dewey, of Worcester, Mass., and Elwyn G. Preston, Jr., of Lexington, Mass.

After a motor trip to Canada, the youthful Bakers will make their home with the bride's parents in Park avenue, until autumn.

The bride was graduated from Rosemary Hall, Greenwich, in 1922, and in 1926 from Vassar College. She attended Radcliffe and studied in Boston until the past winter. She is a member of the New Canaan Country Club. Her maid and matron of honor were her classmates at Vassar.

Mr. Baker graduated from Williams College in 1926 and attended Harvard Law School. He is a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity and is a member of the New Canaan Country Club.

Much interest throughout the country, and in Pittsburgh and the east particularly, is being shown in the marriage today at noon of Ruth Pruyn, daughter of the Robert Dunbar Pruyns, of Glencove, L. I., and Ogden Phipps, son of the Henry Carnegie Phippses, of Spring Hill, Roslyn, L. I., Palm Beach, and formerly of Pittsburgh.

Gotham Wedding

The wedding took place in St. John's of Lattingtown, picturesque country church at Locust Valley, L. I., with only members of the two families and a few friends attending because of mourning in the bride's family.

The bride wore ivory satin in the princess mode, fashioned with long, tight-fitting sleeves, a V-neck line, and a long train. Her veil of rose point lace has been worn by several generations of the Pruyn brides. A cap of tulle, caught with clusters of orange blossoms, held the veil, and her bouquet was of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Louise Iselin, of New York, maid of honor, and Barbara Phipps, the bridegroom's sister; Eleanor Barry, of Llewellyn Park, L. I.; Marian Gray, of New York, as bridesmaids, wore green chiffon gowns, large picture hats to match, and carried apricot tinted roses. Mary Felicite Pratt, young daughter of the junior John T. Pratts, of New York, as flower girl, wore a Kate Greenaway costume of apricot-colored organdie and carried a colonial bouquet.

Mr. Phipps' bride was presented at the Court of St. James following a New York debut. Mr. Phipps was graduated from Harvard this month.

* * *

Attends Bride

The bride wore a princess gown of ivory satin, with a yoke of rose point, and long, tight-fitting sleeves and a full skirt. Her veil of old rose point and duchess lace fell to the tip of the long court train and was held by a cap of lace. She carried gardenias and lilies.

Frances P. Mitchell, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor, and wore a quaint frock of French blue mousseline de soie, having puff sleeves and a peplum. Her picture hat of crin matched the gown. The matron of honor, Mrs. Philip K. Bates, of Dayton, O., wore a similar gown in pale green, and the bridesmaids, in addition to Mary, were Nancy Hull, Marjorie Land and Catharine Kouwenhaven, of Yonkers; Harriet Anne Duell and Jacqueline James, of New York; Marjory Kelly, of Natchez, Miss., and Jeanne Nard, of Clinton, Ia. They all wore peach color frocks, with brown hats.

Robert D. Guilford was the best man and the ushers included Philip K. Bates, John Knox Bogel, Jr., John Atlee Kouwenhaven, William J. Lodge, Alfred E. Longacre, Frederick V. S. Park, Jr., Charles H. Phelps, Dudley F. Wing and Charles Stanley Mitchell, Jr.

* * *

Today I can tell you who the ushers will be at the wedding on Monday of Harriet Louise Provost, daughter of the George Watson Provosts, of Beacon street, and Mason Orne Damon, of Buffalo. It will take place in the home of the bride.

Wedding Ushers

And the ushers will be George Watson Provost, Jr., Oliver B. Merrill, Jr., of New York; Horace C. Winch, of Buffalo, N. Y., and John Clinton Daggett, of Niagara Falls, N. Y. Among the guests will be the junior Edward Orne Damons and their son, Kent Damon, of Fort Dodge, Ia.

Darby, of Linlithgown, Merion, Pa., on the tenth of July in the Washington Memorial Chapel at Valley Forge. She has chosen Mrs. James H. Hardie, of Darlington road, as her matron of honor, and another Pittsburgh girl, Janet Hardie, daughter of the Walter Logan Hardies, of Bartlett street, as maid of honor. Officiating at the wedding will be the Rev. W. Herbert Burk. The marriage will be followed by a reception in the Scott home.

* * *

Out-door entertaining always becomes popular with the coming of summer, and I hear that Mrs. Frederick Way, Sr., will have a garden party at her home, Brick House, Edgeworth, on the afternoon of June 21, midsummer's day, and assisting her will be Miss Agnes Way and Mrs. Frederick Way, Jr.

MOIRE IS MARKED FOR A SUCCESSFUL SEASON

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, JUNE 14.—Some materials seem marked for success and in that category, we must of course, include moire. We do not know the extent of the acclaim accorded in moire weaves on your side, but over here they have been quite successful and nearly every collection has given moire representation. It has, however, been better liked for evening than for day wear, its effect of richness making it an ideal afternoon dark fabric. The majority of moire frocks are generally of distinctive design and clever detail, with an utter absence of ornamentation, the material being considered sufficiently elaborate. Moire is always very gingerly and carefully handled by the designers here, otherwise the effect is apt to be rather "oldish" and heavy, both most undesirable attributes. Simple lines, a light weave and absence of trimming are the three salient points to remember if you are planning an evening frock of moire.

* * *

TO SHOW THE utter simplicity and extreme smartness of a moire gown, we have chosen a Molyneux model in this medium. Captain Molyneux has used moire crepe in a soft cafe au lait with much effect for this evening frock. The bodice is partially concealed beneath a bolero which dips up in front and down behind. Spiral piecings on the skirt overtop a flaring flounce with circular godets spaced at regular intervals all around and reaching to the floor. A narrow ribbon belt, placed at a high waistline, ties at one side.

* * *

OUR ONLY EXCUSE for showing you a picture of a fur-trimmed coat these torrid days is to be found in our desire to acquaint the readers with the earliest possible ideas, developments and trends in matters sartorial. The Chantal coat, therefore, shown here is an early Autumn model and is a clear and clever preview of next season's coat fashions. It is of dove-gray velours de laine, the soft fabric set-off by the lavish use of natural gray astrakan. Amusing little bow-knots of the fabric are poised at the back of the collar and at each elbow. A zig-zag "empiecement" trims the back of the straight coat and is repeated on the equally straight sleeves.

THE PRIVATE LETTERS OF THE LATE

Major Archibald W. Butt

MILITARY AIDE TO BOTH PRESIDENTS

Reveal the Inside Facts for the First Time

IN A SERIES of remarkable letters written by the late Major Butt are described the innermost secrets of the circumstances which led up to the break between President Taft and President Roosevelt. The letters were addressed to Mrs. Clara Butt, a relative, and have been in her possession ever since Major Butt went down with the Titanic.

They are of such intimate nature that it was not possible to publish them during lifetime of former President Taft.

Major Butt was the day-by-day companion of President Taft. He was with him at the White House, played golf with him, accompanied him on every journey and was his confidant. He was an earnest admirer of both President Roosevelt and President Taft and viewed progress of events with greatest sorrow. He left, however, a most impartial account of the events which parted these two great men, once the closest of friends.

Richard Arlen Will Play Hero in Film Version Of Rinehart Story

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 14.

Friday the thirteenth wasn't so unlucky for Richard Arlen. He received the assignment to play opposite Nancy Carroll in a film version of Mary Roberts Rinehart's "Lost Ecstasy."

This is another story of a society girl who comes West and [illegible] a cowboy. After the fashion of the movies, they're changing the title to "Rodeo Romance." Euphony is everything in picture titles, you know.

Was talking to Dick Arlen today. He is very much upset over some unfair criticism that has found [illegible] way into print. It seems that a good while ago [illegible] E. W. Mason, the author of "Four Feathers," wrote a letter praising Dick's performance in the film of the novel, and asking for a photograph.

Richard Arlen

GETS "POLITE REPLY

When the letter arrived Dick happened to be away on location, and his mail was taken care of at the studio. Such is fame that the star thought [illegible] Mr. Mason's letter [illegible] He was sent a polite reply, indicating that if he would send one dollar, rates being lighter to England, a picture would be mailed him.

In some way the incident got into the London press and then to this country, where it has been picked up by a number of newspapers. The first hint that Dick got of the letter was in a clipping of one of those articles. He was [illegible] an explanation to Mr. Mason when I saw him.

"What makes a great director?" someone asked Edmund Goulding.

"His last picture," replied Goulding cynically.

MONEY FOR MONTE

Week-ending at Agua Caliente I met Monte Blue, who was with his wife on a brief holiday.

He tells me that Warners have given him a cash settlement of $250,000 for the rest of his contract, which had about a year and a half to go.

Monte Blue

"I'm going to Europe in August, and I won't have to worry if I never do another day's work in pictures," he says.

But, of course, he'll be back. They all do. Monte has had a little hard luck on stories recently, and it has turned him against the talkies.

MIX ELOPEMENT

Things looked exciting for a while after Ruth Mix, 17-year-old daughter of the Western star, eloped to Yuma, Ariz., and married Douglas Gilmore, film heavy. Ruth's mother, who was the first Mrs. Mix, threatened annulment. She changed her mind, however, and welcomed the elopers home. It seems that Ruth would have been of age in another month, and Mrs. Mix believed it would only mean another elopement.

THINK IT OVER

You'd be surprised to know, though, how many do think it over, even in the three days required by the California law between the issuance of a license and the marriage ceremony. For instance, I hear that Luther Reed, the director, and Jocelyn Lee, will postpone their wedding for a while, at least. They got their license several days ago.

Yuma, by the way, is becoming quite a Gretna Green. Gretta Young and Grant Withers eloped there in an airplane to avoid the three-day delay in this state. They, too, faced parental opposition, but were forgiven on their return.

Las Vegas, Nevada, is another favored spot for elopers. Jack Gilbert and Ina Claire were married there a year ago, in May. Jim Tully's wife reversed the process by going there to get her divorce.

POLO, BOXING MIXED IN "SOCIAL LION," ALDINE COMEDY

By HOWARD L. BROWNING, JR.

With the snappiest ending seen in a moving picture of recent months, the Aldine presents good comedy under the title of "The Social Lion" as the week's feature attraction. It is an adaptation to flickers of Octavus Roy Cohen's "Marco Himself."

Jack Oakie plays the lead as a self-confident polo fighter, polo player, songster, Romeo and what not. In fact one would not draw out the truth too much if one said he is conceited—no end.

Mary Brian, plucky girl, is his true love and defender. But the poor lad goes high-society and is naively that way about another girl. He plays polo—it's a pleasure—and carries the highbrow club's team to victory. He ends by winning a prize fight and being himself after a whereas and a whimper of melodramatic rot.

The lad had previously lost to his opponent when said foe pulled a phoney and told him his shoe string was untied, socking him for a k. o. unaware—and the sock didn't wake him up. So he wears zippers in his victorious final bout, displayed in a grand fade-out without benefit of hot lips.

It's all a mixture of low comedy, slapstick, melodrammer and the plain common or garden variety of farce. I like it.

"CAPTAIN OF GUARD" IS TALK FILM IN ENRIGHT

Based on the mutterings and rumblings preceding the French Revolution, up to the storming of the Bastile, the show revolves around the captain of the King's Guard and the maid with whom he is in love. She is the daughter of an innkeeper and is called "The Torch" for her propensity in stirring up revolutionary sentiment.

All the makings of a good, first-class drama with that theatrical content that lends artistic merit to a stage show or a movie are in this flicker. By the injection, however, of spectacular, superficial scenes without theatrical merit, there is in "Captain of the Guard" little of that divine quality of the stage which inspires the feeling of spiritual fulfillment in an audience.

The music, the photography, some of the love scenes will keep you pleasantly occupied without the necessity of thinking too much and with little strain on your emotions.

The sound effects are possibly among the poorest of the season.

The best acting of the show is donated by Lionel Barrymore as colonel of the Hussars and Stuart Holmes as Louis, the Sixteenth.

"French Kisses," a short feature, is good slapstick comedy in a French studio.

IN 'SO THIS IS LONDON' WILL ROGERS MAKES EVERYONE LAUGH

By GEORGE SEIBEL

THE WISEST American since Ralph Waldo Emerson and the rarest comedian since Joe Jefferson, are both on the talking screen this week at the Penn Theater. They are Will Rogers, and the title of the film, "So This Is London," gives but a faint idea of the huge humor that has been injected into the amusing stage play.

George Seibel

When the last fadeout comes with Rogers and the British lord singing "God Save the King" and "My Country 'Tis of Thee" in more or less unison, the audience has laughed pretty continuously for about two hours.

It is due mainly to Will Rogers, who plays himself all through the picture. And Will Rogers as himself is one of the best things in America.

BUT HE'S AN ACTOR

But this picture brings the revelation that Will is an actor, a comedian, of genuine power. There were some pathetic scenes exhibiting his love for his boy and his awkward effort to apologize to the girl his boy loves—and in these scenes Will shows the workings of his heart and the core of his humanity with such artless art that one is really reminded of Joe Jefferson.

Will Rogers getting his passport. Will Rogers seasick. Will Rogers meeting a British lord. Will Rogers riding to hounds and shooting—these are some of the funniest things the talking screen has brought.

Will Rogers also has rewritten much of the dialogue, injecting his own quaint personality and point of view, so the picture is better than the play. It is all superlative, with Irene Rich and Frank Albertson fitting in perfectly.

AND THE STAGE SHOW

One could rhapsodize half a column about Will Rogers and forget all about the stage show, which is decidedly good. There's a young man named Richy Craig, who tells stories very well, and there's Wesley Eddy, who sings with his accustomed zest. There are the Sidell Sisters in their funniest of acrobatic antics. There is Pesetzki with his symphonic orchestra and Oscar with his organ broadcast, and the Chester Hale Girls with several catchy and colorful numbers.

But the big thing this week is Will Rogers, the ambassador of good will. "So This Is London," thanks to him, is the most enjoyable thing the talking screen has yet produced.

A used car will be a wise investment in recreation and enjoyment. Buy one tomorrow, when you have plenty of time to inspect and select the one you like.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

Wistfulness

You've little cause to bless my memory,
But yet, my dear, I rather hope that you
Glance back at our affair and think of me,
And recollect the things we used to do.

Remember all the dream-ships sent away?
How strange that not a one came sailing back.
Recall those rules I never could obey—
Pertaining to the straight and narrow track?

Oh, well, no doubt the lad you love today
Has traits that never cause you grave remorse;
You did the proper thing to go your way,
For lads like me are small acount, of course;

But yet I like to think at times that you
Are wond'ring where I am—and what I do.
—Monta Ray.

The Retort Swell

A year ago, Bill Terry, the star first baseman of the New York Giants, refused to report to the team for the salary they offered him. Bill is quite a wealthy guy, owning a large chain of gas stations in Memphis, Tenn., and could afford to act kittenish.

After considerable dickering, the New York Giants told him to come on to New York to argue the matter out.

Bill arrived in the Giants' office and went into a session on salary.

"How much do you want?" he was asked.

"Fifteen thousand dollars!" repeated one of the officials. "Why, a bank president doesn't get that."

"Well," replied Bill indifferently, "let's drop the subject altogether. I'll go back and run my gas stations and you go and get yourself a bank president to play first base."

In Fewer Words

"Eve's Leaves—Almost Immediately."

Hehehehe

One of Willie Howard's better gags deals with his dislike for ham. He was groaning about it again to his brother Eugene.

"How I hate that stuff!" thundered the greatest of all the Chevalier mimics. "Last night I was in a restaurant and they put a whole plate of ham in front of me, but I ate it all up!"

"Why did you eat it if you hate it so?" asked Eugene.

Observation

Take it from one of the prettiest members of the "Flying High" show at the Apollo Theater. The offices of the Lorillard Tobacco Company, she reports, are in the wrong building. They are located at 119 West 40th street, but she doubts very much whether the tobacco officials know that as soon as you enter the elevators the first thing that strikes your eye is a large sign reading:

"No Smoking."

So They Say

"Titanic" Thompson, the sportsman (who was a witness in the Rothstein case) whose daring in the various gaming houses leaves you in awe, was a heavy loser in a Chicago dice house five years ago. On the way home with some gamblers that dawn, he offered to wager his last $1,500 that he could throw an orange, on the first attempt, onto the roof of the Sherman Hotel, which is over 20 stories. The bet was taken and "Titanic" proceeded to a fruitstand two blocks away. He returned, took aim, and succeeded!

The other lad remarked that the object thrown was too small to be an orange and to satisfy his doubt, he went up to the roof and found a lemon. "You said an orange!" he argued.

"Titanic" then took an orange from his pocket and hurled it onto the same roof, which is about as far as Babe Ruth would bat a baseball.

"Why," asked a comrade later, "did you throw a lemon the first time?"

"Because," replied the wise guy, "if I missed, I would have used the same alibi and said that it wasn't an orange."

Swifty

Up at the Plaza the other evening at a party in honor of Amos 'n' Andy, Harry (Eagle Beak) Ruby and Bert (Bald) Kalmar, who are writing the radio stars' first RKO movie, were very amusing. "Tell us a story," suggested Andy.

Kalmar obliged by remembering the time he encountered Bugs Baer on 46th St. and said:

"Bugs, is Harry over at the club?"

"I don't know," replied Baer, "the last time I saw him was in Seattle. He was on top of a Totem pole."

Types I'm Glad I'm Not

"You always seem to avoid that guy. What's the matter with him, anyway?" "Oh, he's all right, I suppose, but he doesn't wear rubber heels and he deafens you when he walks . . . He sucks his teeth after each meal . . . His coat always fits him across the hips like a woman's . . . He lets cafe entertainers warble at his table for half an hour and then goes out without tipping them or saying 'Thanks,' unless he's with Peggy Joyce, who shames him into it . . . His idea of a pal is one who can do things for him . . . He never does a favor unless there is some profit in it . . . He talks boisterously in public places to attract attention, and he applauds when a night club master of ceremonies says: 'Give that little girl a hand.'"

Imagine

It's little things like this that keep big stars from getting bigger. A Hollywood director now in Manhattan was discussing the amazing comeback of Ruth Chatterton, who was considered a flopperoo shortly after the talkie vogue started.

"Ruth," said the director, "was a failure in the talkies because of her affected voice. She would get terrible tony or British and say 'heah' for 'hear' and 'reahly' for 'really' and so forth.

"One day after she was out of a job a director heard her talk and realized that she affected the snooty manner for professional reasons. He told her he thought he could arrange her comeback if she would act her age. The rest is history."

Evidence Enough

Before they were divorced, Charles (Show Boat) Winninger's wife, Blanche Ring, was very miserable about his attentions to a well-known comedienne. Blanche confided to intimates about her husband.

"But," comforted a friend, "Charlie can't be serious. All men get like that now and then. Don't worry about him, and, besides, what proof have you?"

"Proof enough," replied Miss Ring. "He's been giving her his best gags."

Two Orchestras In Dells Sunday

Two orchestras are to furnish continuous music for the dancing in the Dells, on the Wildwood road. These orchestras are directed by Dewey Bergman and Etzi Covato. Sophie Tucker is to conclude her week's engagement tonight. Both orchestras will combine in a concert Sunday night.

In Mystery

MOTHER LOVE THEME; BELLE BENNETT IN WARNER

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"Courage," a drama of mother love and sacrifice, is the new talkie in the Warner. It is based on Tom Barry's stage play of the same name. And, in its present form, it is all very motherish. None the less, it is drama that commands attention. Its theme is close to life. And Belle Bennett has the featured role.

Miss Bennett demonstrates, as she did in the silent days of "Stella Dallas," that, as an actress, she is a great mother. Her portrayals have sincerity and understanding. She knows how to make the heart throbs very real.

In "Courage" she has a young army of children—seven to all. And much of the story has to do with her battle to keep them together. These children are the offsprings of a loveless marriage. Six of them bear resemblance to their father. But the seventh and youngest is a sort of rebel. And a slanderous tongue focuses itself on the mother through him.

But truth and mother love are triumphant in the end. After the showers of tears come sunshine and promise of happiness.

Leon Janney, boy actor, does a likeable piece of work as the youngest son. Marian Nixon puts in some romance and does a lot of hysterical weeping and shouting. Richard Tucker makes a small part outstanding by his acting.

The film has been accorded kind directorial treatment for the most part.

NEW FILMS COMING TODAY AND MONDAY

Reginald Denny comes to the Harris screen today in "What a Man." Victor Graff and Ralph Harrison's RKOhans continue as the stage attraction.

"Midnight Mystery," featuring Betty Compson and Lowell Sherman, opens on the Sheridan Square screen Monday.

"All Quiet on the Western Front" continues on the Pitt screen, opening its third week Monday.

Will Rogers Says:

BOSTON, Mass., June 14.—Everybody says: "Why don't we get more fine high type men in the Senate"? Well, New Jersey goes on national exhibition. I saw with my own eyes in Mexico the way Morrow pulled us out of a terrible situation, by replacing politics with national honor and diplomacy with common sense. I honestly believe he is the most competent man I ever met, and awfull, human. Few states ever have such a chance. If New Jersey turns him down they just revert back to their usual oblivion. Any man to run against him would have to have more egotism than state pride.

Yours,
WILL.

P. S. I guess this German boy is a fine young man, but the condition the boxing game is in, it does seem rather appropriate that its champion should be named "Smelling." We know of no sport with a greater odor.

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's Question: Should the state provide a college education for those people who have the ability but are financially unable to go?

Fred J. Jordan

FRED J. JORDAN, attorney, East End: Many persons are successful without a college education and would be more so had they been given one. A college education gives a broader outlook on life.

Miss Dauria

MISS VIRGINIA DAURIA, secretary, Homestead: Yes, I think the state should provide a college education for those who cannot afford it themselves and who have exceptionally brilliant minds.

Miss Francis

MISS ISABEL FRANCIS, secretary, Beechview: The state should furnish a college education for the students above normal—for those who are unusually bright.

Murray J. Jordan

MURRAY J. JORDAN, attorney, East End: Such a procedure is, of course, very desirable if efficiently operated. The system would be successful if it were exhaustively studied and carried out under the most careful supervision, and if provision were made to eliminate other factors which would be totally disassociated with efficient mentality and lack of finances.

Miss Matson

MISS HILDER MATSON, secretary, Swissvale: Yes, the state should provide a college education for those who are capable and cannot afford it. Many would benefit by a college education but have not the money themselves.

Mr. Hugus

WILBUR HUGUS, lawyer, Y. M. C. A.: The person who receives some help with his college work should be sufficiently successful, but he should not depend on outside sources for all his help. He should be made to feel somewhat denpendent on himself and thus accomplish more. The most necessary help is always appreciated and should be given.

GIRL UNAFRAID

Ardeth Is Determined Not To Give Ken Up

CHAPTER LVII.

Ken's breakdown was more severe than any of them had realized on that first day. Had he stayed in the city—had he been held in a sanitarium against his wishes, he would have rebelled and the results would have been disastrous. But in this soothing quiet and with Ardeth's continuous presence, he was submissive and content. Nature supplied her own remedy in the form of deep, exhaustive sleep.

To Ardeth, time went on in an undisturbed dream. Two days of peace, filled with sunshine and the smell of the pines. Reality could not reach her. Despite the abrupt change, it seemed strangely natural to be here.

There were times when she found her heart leaping as she thought of the shop, but they were infrequent. Hard to imagine the teeming city, the rush of intent humans up here in the quiet mountains.

Two days—filled with the trees, with the small tasks of the household. Ken did not gather the true meaning of the situation. Most of the time he slept. When he did rouse his words were dreamy and after eating he drowsed off again. His weary mind and body were drinking up rest as a sponge drinks water.

Mid-afternoon of the third day the silence was broken by the sound of a motor. Tom drove up before the cabin and beside him was Mary Eastwood.

Black eyes smoldering with excitement, Mary stood beside Ardeth on the porch. Tom had gone in to see Ken, and Mary fired the opening shot.

Ardeth Determined

"Ardeth, my darling child, what craziness is this? To stay here like this—"

"I know it's not conventional, but sometimes conventions must be thrust aside, Mary dear." Ardeth's tranquil gaze met Mary's steadily.

"Conventions — oh, rubbish!" Mary wrung her hands in her earnestness. "It isn't that I care! Nor Fred. Or even dear old Tom, though I think he's really heartbroken. But — you can't slap the world in the face, Ardeth. What about when you go back?"

Ardeth shrugged. She had leaned back against the rough sapling which formed the rail of the porch and her eyes went up to a tall pine which seemed fringed with silver in the clear light.

"Time enough to take that up when I have to, Mary. It was a case of deciding quickly. I couldn't let Cecile get Ken—even if she wanted him. He needed me. I listened to the world's opinion, Mary, and look what it did—nearly killed Ken. Now he's mine. He is weak and sick, and I'm going to see that he gets well. I'll never leave him again, I don't care what happens."

Hurt by Life

"But, darling, it will only end in a scandal! Cecile is furious. And she's beastly self-righteous. She'll hang on to Ken legally now, just for spite. Don't you see, you're playing right into her hands?"

"Not here, maybe. But later. You can't spend all your days in a mountain cabin. And you're not the sort of woman who can get away with this sort of thing, Ardeth. Not the flaunting adventuress type. You're too sensitive. Life can hurt you."

"Life has hurt me," Ardeth's eyes had come back to regard her steadily. "And Ken needs me."

"What does Ken say? What does he think?"

Her face was lovely with tenderness. He doesn't think, Mary. He's like a man drugged. It just seems so blessedly right to him to have me around here that he accepts it as natural. Honestly, Mary, I think that another day of the strain would have been too much. He'll be all right but he's as weak as a baby."

Mary stared at her helplessly, suddenly finding that she had no arguments to advance. There was, as well, a serenity, an aura of quiet happiness which Mary had never seen before.

Fine and true, she seemed, standing here in the sunlight. A sweet gravity, a thoughtfulness about her which was new—and more of the woman than the girl.

Cecile to Blame

"Oh, my dear, if I could only make things come right for the two of you. Damn Cecile and her selfishness! I'll have to tell you—I went to her as soon as Tom told me. I pleaded with her—I begged her to do the decent thing and set Ken free. You see he hasn't a chance now—she'd bring counter-suit to any complaint. The woman's a dog-in-the-manager! She sneered at me. Talked a lot of noble stuff which was as false as her own smile. I could have killed her."

Again Mary was struck by the complete indifference of the girl's attitude.

"Cecile can't make it right or wrong, my being here," she said earnestly. "Ken needs me. That's all that counts with me. Cecile is responsible for—for him lying there like that—" She pointed back to the house. "This sickness of his goes back to that night after the baby's death, when he came to me—Cecile hurt something fine and good in Ken's very soul that time, Mary. It's as if—as if she'd stabbed his soul and it had been slowly bleeding to death all this time. I suppose that sounds melodramatic, but it shows what I mean. And she'll never get a chance to hurt him again. He's mine."

Opinion Doesn't Matter

"Beautiful but crazy!" Mary raged to Tom when they had left and were driving down the grade in the quiet evening light. "But what can I do? She's of age—and in her right mind, though she doesn't act it!" After a moment of silence she burst out vigorously. "And moreover, she's dead right! I'd do the same thing if it were Fred lying there in Ken Gleason's place."

But Mary's generous opinion, or the world's spiteful one, made little difference after all to Ardeth.

Tranquil days and deep, star-filled nights, each one bringing returning strength to Ken. Little by little reality pushed in upon him once more. He watched the girl moving about the room and his mind groped back over the past days. Something like terror came into his eyes.

"It's all wrong, dear," he said slowly. "Oh, you shouldn't have done this! What will people—what will everyone say. And—" his thin hands moved nervously, "I can't make it right for you."

Ardeth had been sitting by the window shelling peas for dinner. She rose and came over to his side. She held his head against her breast, kissed his closed eyes.

ONE MYSTERY OF LIFE

Drawn by NELL BRINKLEY

"HOW SHE DOES IT!" The too-plump woman and girl, the girl with the luxurious "over-stuffed" body, knocks her poor head that always looks too small in comparison to the rest of her, with a padded fist, whose bones—worst luck—are almost always small and dainty, and wonders "How she does it!—That other girl."

How can she eat those gorgeous affairs, filet of tender steak, new potatoes—four of them, peas, lima beans, flooded with gravy, Boston brown bread, corn bread, white bread, hot rolls tipsy with butter, dessert smothered in whipped cream like Desdemona under the pillows, and candy—after. Tuck away all this—and still stay effin-thin. HOW?

Under poor plump-girls, too luxurious padding is usually a fairy-frame—witness her small hands and feet, and nose. And in this fairy-frame beats just as gentle and romantic a heart as the slim girl has, and just as hungry a tummy calls for the delicate ecstacies of food.

Before her sits a hard, brown, curled and warped bit of toast on an immaculate plate—and a cold, clear, austere, thin, glass of water. And even so Luxuria stays FAT. Before Nymphia is a regular trencher-man's feast. And she eats it all, daintily, but surely. And she stays thin—as a wand.

Why that is, is Luxuria's mystery of life! She wishes that Nymphia could be harmlessly taken apart, and peered into, to solve it all.

And then waiters, no matter how swank the place and how discreet, always have a remote rumor of a smile on their faces when they put down her warped bit of lonely toast! Never mind, plump girl; You are the one who worries most about it. Cupid hasn't passed you by, that I have noticed. The chubbiest girl I know, when she goes a-visiting her parents, gets a letter-a-day from her jurist husband, imploring her to hurry back because nothing is right and he misses her beyond anything. And she studies the letter and marvels; saying, "I don't see how he can—but ain't Love wonderful!"

How to Keep Well

By DR. COPELAND

A Courageous Mind an Aid In Illness

As one grows older, the body is subject to great changes. Unfortunately we are not so strongly resistant to disease.

Parkinson's disease," so-called, attacks persons of advanced age. It rarely attacks a young person. Men are more liable to have it than women.

DR. COPELAND

The disease was first described by Dr. Parkinson, hence its name. The doctors call it "paralysis agitans," and the common name for it is "shaking palsy." Recently I have been asked to repeat some things I have said about this ailment.

It may begin abruptly and suddenly in various muscles, or in one or more of the limbs. On the other hand it may develop slowly and progress very gradually for two or three years.

There is pain moving about, and a trembling or tremor is noticed now in the arm, and again in the leg. It is apt to be located on one side of the body.

A peculiar factor in the disease is known as "Parkinson's Mask." This comes early in the disease. The eyebrows are drawn up all the time, the lips move slightly and slowly in speaking, and the face looks almost expressionless. It is as if the features had been cast into a motionless mask.

There is weakness of the muscles, and general stiffness is observed. Muscular movements are made slowly and deliberately. Short, hurried steps are characteristic.

For years the trembling or palsy may be in one leg, or in one or both of the arms. The hands are affected. The fingers move all at once, trembling, and the thumb oscillates toward them, suggesting the holding of a pen. This movement is brought on by excitement or intense emotion, and it may continue while the other muscles are at rest. During sleep the movement ceases.

The disease is usually brought on by anxiety, exposure to wet or cold, worry, injury, involving important nerves, or infectious fevers. It is often associated with rheumatism.

Fortunately the mind is not disturbed. The mental processes are just as good as ever. One hasn't much pain, but it is natural to worry about the condition.

The cultivation of a philosophical mind, and patience with the annoyance of the trembling and the disturbed gait will help much in keeping physically well otherwise. There will be periods when there seems to be improvement. Unfortunately there is little to be done to relieve the symptoms.

We are hopeful that the glandular extracts may prove efficacious in this disease. Some progress is being made in this direction. What is known as the "parathyroid extract" has been used with benefit.

Roderick and Junior Come to Blows and Are Separated

As the sound of Junior's angry howl floated up to us my mother-in-law stopped her majestic ascent of the stairs and shrank pitifully against the railing.

"Run, Margaret," she said feebly, all anger drained from her. "You can get there faster than I can."

I did not share the fear which I knew was hers—that some harm had come to her beloved grandson. It had been a howl of anger, not of bodily hurt, which had come from my son's lips. But I was much depressed, nevertheless, as I obeyed her injunction and ran down the stairs and into the living room, where to my horrified surprise I found my small son and Dicky's nephew each held by the collar at arm's length by my father, but each straining at his bonds and almost choking with the attempt to translate his anger into words.

They had already expressed it with their fists. Blood was dripping from Roderick's nose and there was an abrasion over Junior's eye. Indeed, as I went swiftly toward the corner I heard Henry say to William:

"Gee, that kid'll have a swell shiner. Rod sure remembered the lessons you gave him."

"Oh, that lad's there." William returned with a complacent air which made my palms itch to box his ears. "But the little fellow isn't any fadeout, either. We'll have to match 'em up."

"You poor fish," Roderick choked out as I reached them, "I'll mash your face in."

"I'll smash you into pieces, you bunch of soup greens," Junior shouted in return, and I saw Dicky hastily avert his face, and realized that he was actually laughing.

But there was no merriment in my father's eyes although upon most occasions he has a most delightful sense of humor. But I knew that he saw only the tiny cut upon Junior's forehead and that the look of distaste he turned upon Roderick was his unjust but grandfatherly reaction to the quarrel.

With a little feeling of weariness I saw that whatever investigation or disciplining the altercation demanded would fall on my shoulders. Indeed, Dicky spoke decisively when he turned around after his paroxysm of laughter, his face composed, though his eyes were dancing.

"Madge, will you attend to this? I'll be the ambulance man, but the court-martial is beyond me."

I stepped between the two combatants, with my back to Roderick, and, taking my small son's face between my hands and turning it gently upward, I looked down at him with steady, silent inquiry. He wriggled, tried to turn his eyes away, then shut them tight. But I did not speak, and after a minute he opened them again and looked up at me, not defiantly, but with a look which made me realize that I must tread warily in this, for Junior patently thought himself the aggrieved party in the quarrel. I knew no surer way to estrange his confidence in my justice than to give a verdict or award punishment hastily.

Behind me I could hear Roderick snuffling as Dicky washed his face and stopped his nosebleed. He had stopped crying also, and I guessed that he was watching with keen interest my silent interview with Junior.

"Have you stopped it?" I said over my shoulder to Dicky.

"Yes, he's all right now," Dicky answered.

"Then please bring him up to Junior's room in five minutes. See that he keeps perfectly quiet until then. Come with me, son."

I took Junior by the arm and steered him toward the door. As I did so I heard Roderick's voice rise in inquiry half fearful, half joyfully triumphant:

"Is he going to get a licking?"

I felt Junior stiffen in my grasp as I turned toward the other small boy.

"No, Roderick, neither of you is going to get a licking. But perhaps you will wish you did have one."

Junior knew perfectly what I meant—that his punishment would probably be the loss of some coveted privileges. But as I uttered the words my eyes fell upon the faces of William and Henry Harrison, and to my amazement I saw horror and terror reflected in their eyes.

The Marry-Go-Round

Husbands—And Others

Women are said to be more jealous than men. Yet no woman hates an "It girl" as the average man hates a crooning tenor.

A man may promise to love you when you have "silver threads among the gold," but somehow, he can never visualize you with a triple chin and still think of you as the romance of his future.

* * *

If a faithless husband's love is valued at $200,000 in an alienation suit, it makes you positively DIZZY to think what your devoted, non-skidding husband's affections would be worth in cold cash.

* * *

Woman will never be man's "equal" until she is able to look as unalluring in a bathing suit as the average man does and still to think of herself as fatally fascinating.

Some women are born with "It," a few manage to acquire "It"—but most of them appear to think that "It" is merely a matter of rubbing on a little more lipstick and displaying a few more vertebrae.

* * *

Next to a woman on a fishing trip, probably nothing is more useless and superfluous than a man around the house on Monday morning and cleaning days.

* * *

Some men and women are doomed to unhappiness in this life, because no matter how often they love or marry, their taste runs true to type—and the type is always a butterfly or a false alarm.

When a woman begins counting her blessings, funny how seldom she stops to think of her husband as one of them.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Difficult Invitation to 'Regret'

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning a shower for a young married girl, and as I don't wish it to be a miscellaneous shower, but want to give one large gift and have the guests help pay for it, I would like advice as to how the invitations should be worded. There will be a luncheon also as part of the shower.

MRS. F. S.

The only way to accomplish this is to state in your note of invitation just what you have told me—that you wish the shower to take the form of one gift from all of the guests, and tell what you have decided to give. State too the price of this, and tell each guest how much her assignment is. The guests then send their checks to you for this amount, and you then buy the gift that you have in mind.

You realize, of course, that this is not the easiest kind of shower to give? You do not make it easy for a friend to "regret" the shower for then it looks as if she did not wish to contribute the assigned amount toward the present. In other words, in order not to be socially embarrassed, every one whom you invite will have to send her check or money order for the amount that you indicate, whether or not she intends to attend.

At their very best, showers are difficult to plan so that they keep the best social status, but the kind of shower that you plan to give will find it even more difficult. However, perhaps you will be able to get around this by the way you word your invitations.

A Courtesy to the Bridegroom's Mother

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please advise me whether it is proper to have the mother of the prospective bridegroom attend the announcement of the engagement? E. E.

Yes, this is a gracious and hospitable and expected invitation for the bride to give.

Household Hints

Don't throw away the card table that is no longer presentable for a hand of bridge. Perhaps the top is worn and you are a little ashamed to let it even hide in a dark closet. But it does slip in there so easily and has so many uses, it should not be discarded. A square of gay oilcloth drawn tightly over the top and tacked down firmly will renovate it at little expense and trouble. Then when you need an extra serving table in the kitchen it can be readily pressed into service. If you live in a small apartment and have only a tiny kitchenette a card table set up will make serving much simpler. On it may be placed the salad and dessert that you just haven't room for in the kitchenette. And when that inspiration to do a bit of sewing overcomes you, the card table will provide an excellent cutting board. It is most useful in the children's nursery, too, and makes a fine drawing and cut-out table for the kiddies. Best of all the oilcloth may always be washed and kept perfectly clean.

Horoscopes

Sunday, June 15

Sunday's horoscope holds some very contradictory configurations, pointing to benefits for the clergy or for elderly persons and institutions, with a welcome change or journey; but also there is danger of contention, strife and defeat unless self-control in conduct and wise handling of funds obtain.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy an advantageous change, during the year, with benefits through labor or elderly persons, but they should keep a firm leash on tongue and temper and handle their funds judiciously.

A child born on this day should be ardent, impetuous and energetic, and should be successful through its own industry and application as well as through its ingenuity and skill.

Monday, June 16

Monday's astrological figure is a most propitious one with the Luminaries in trine aspect and Jupiter trined by Luna. This betokens advancement, preferment, favors and honors in employment, in office and in business, with expansion, growth and gratifying emoluments in all directions.

Those whose birthday it is are to have a progressive and prosperous year, with the prospect of rising to high and honored place in employment or in whatever field of endeavor they are engaged.

A child born on this day may be assured of success and position in life, attained by its own capabilities, merits, popularity and native good fortune.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

A light application of vaseline to the eyelashes will act as a tonic. It will make them grow longer, and it will make them grow thicker. Put it on at bedtime, but don't let it enter the eyes.

The purpose of cosmetic gloves to be worn at night is to keep the lotion or cream from rubbing off. Large sized white cotton gloves will serve. Holes should be cut in the palms to provide ventilation. Keeping the hands oiled for eight hours will do much toward restoring the exquisite texture of the skin, creating a soft smooth clear surface.

Whenever the hair is combed, a few hairs will detach themselves from the home camp. Scalps are always shedding their fur. Therefore the girl with the short bob should watch out for stray fuzzers. They are anything but alluring when dangling from side locks or resting on the shoulders of the frock. There is something loathsome about a hair to which one is not naturally attached.

We've heard about the clothespin treatment for pug noses, but here's a new one. Some of the young fry, eager for tapering finger ends, are wearing small clothespins pressed against either side of their finger nails. Well! well!

Cold water absorbs the natural oil on the hands, and leaves them chapped and rough. On every woman's dressing table there should be a hand lotion or cream to be used freely and often. The old-time formula of glycerine and rosewater, equal parts, will soothe a skin surface that is scalding and painful.

Fingernails, high lighted with all the colors of the rainbow by means of liquid veneers, are being worn fairly long again. Chinese red, jade green or purple show up the outline of the nail to such an extent that it must be perfectly contoured. The polish doesn't touch the half moon at the base of the nail, nor does it extend over the nail eave. Some gals like the gay polish, some don't. The matter is not vitally important.

DULL SUMMER SEEN FOR STEEL

Activity Is Slipping More Rapidly Than Expected; Predict Revival in Fall

By B. E. V. LUTY

Steel activity has been slipping more rapidly of late, presaging a duller summer than was indicated by the showing a few weeks ago. A revival around September 1 is being predicted, but a mere upturn after the dullness now in prospect might not mean much except in a comparative way. To take a forward look it is well to review afresh what occurred since the first of the year particularly as some recent developments make things look different in the retrospect.

The phenomenon of steel production reaching a peak in February is still an awkward thing. The peak usually occurs in March, occasionally in April.

SECONDARY REACTION

There may have been too drastic liquidation of stocks of steel and manufactures for January inventory and then a replenishment, but now in the retrospect it does seem that there was too much "confidence" in January and February just when it was being preached there was not enough. After February each month decreased more than its predecessor in the number of tons a day produced and as the total was decreasing the successive percentages increased markedly. In the light of both the steel statistics and some other statistics one may say that lately there has been a "secondary reaction," but it is simpler to say that apparently there was a short spell of too much confidence, whereby there is merely a continuous depression, without the progressive recovery that was predicted.

PREDICTIONS AWRY

One prediction was based on the much mentioned building program. February was too early to be affected by it, whereby if it is working now it ought to show up all the more strongly, yet there is much less steel activity than in February and if it is not working now one is puzzled to guess when it will.

Another prediction referred to automobiles. There would be a bad spell and then progressive recovery. The statistics plainly show there has been no progressive recovery in even a mild form.

The one strong item in steel demand is line pipe and the interesting thing is to relate this to total steel, to see how much this activity can help the general situation. Two attempts have been made to estimate the amount of line pipe recently booked, one arriving at "500,000 to 550,000 tons" and the other calling it "approaching 1,000,000 tons." Neither means anything practical unless the time or rate of delivery is indicated.

PRICES STEADIER

Taking the whole range of finished steel prices, some quite steady, some unsteady and some rather erratic, it is probably a fact that prices have been losing ground less in the last week or two than formerly. No such thing as general stabilization can be considered likely in a period of declining production, unless perhaps after some very unfavorable earnings reports have been compiled, but there is no visible reason why wire pipe, sheets and tin plate should not hold their recent levels. As to bars, shapes and plates it has been well known for weeks that prices regarded as the open market apply only to moderate sized lots down to carloads, large lots going at various prices, whereby it is rather likely that if these lines are stabilized it will be at lower levels than those now quoted as the market.

WILLYS HEAD OPTIMISTIC

TOLEDO, June 14.—Willys Overland Company will make a small net profit for six months ended June 30, according to an estimate by L. A. Miller, president, at a meeting of foreign sales directors.

Mr. Miller stated he is more optimistic about the general outlook for future business, when retail buying is again resumed, than at any time since he joined the company several years ago.

About 9,000 employes are working about four days a week in the local plant on present curtailed schedules.

The company has improved its cash position in the first half of the current year and has purchased about 8,500 shares of its preferred stock for retirement. It also will retire the usual $1,000,000 of its bonds next quarter, leaving $3,000,000 outstanding, Mr. Miller said.

Bankers See Market In Strong Position

NEW YORK, June 14.—The low point of business depression and the stock market is coinciding with the offering of German reparation bonds, in the opinion of West & Co., expressed in the current issue of their Fortnightly Financial Review.

Liquidation, which has proceeded for the past six weeks, has placed the stock market in a strong technical position as far as the leading issues are concerned and the time is approaching when corporation earnings will begin to compare with the less prosperous half of 1929, according to the bankers.

On Monday night the International dealer organization will hold a meeting, at which they will be shown a portion of the picture. On Tuesday at 8:15 the public is invited to see both the chassis and the picture.

PIPE OUTLOOK IMPROVES

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 14.—T. L. Girdler, chairman and president of the Republic Steel Corporation, believes new business with the steel industry will improve during the summer because of low stocks in the hands of consumers. He states outlook for steel pipe is especially promising.

Republic has a substantial backlog of orders for electrically welded tubing which it is able to produce from three inches to 16 inches in diameter. Another mill is being installed which will produce tubing up to 24 inches in diameter. Bookings so far indicate steady engagement of this capacity during the remainder of the year.

Merger of Paper Firms Biggest In Empire

Anglo-Canadian Pulp and Paper Mills, Ltd., will merge with Canada Power and Paper Corporation, controlled by the Holt-Gundy group, according to Lord Rothermere, president of Anglo-Canadian Pulp. The amalgamation will result in the largest newsprint manufacturing corporation in the British Empire.

No financing is contemplated, as the mergers will be effected by exchange of ordinary shares of Anglo-Canadian Pulp and Paper Mills for common shares of Canada Power and Paper Corporation. The latter company will assume the outstanding debenture obligations and will guarantee the dividends on the outstanding 7 per cent preferred stock of the former company.

Freeport Texas To Extend Output

Improvements about to be effected by Freeport Texas Company at its Hoskins Mount plant, near Freeport, Tex., will increase producing capacity of the plant 30 per cent.

The improvements will include more efficient methods of treating water supply, the use of flue gases for preheating feed water and various other engineering economies. The company's largest plant is located at Hoskins Mound, in which property it is jointly interested with the Texas Company.

Other plans have been formulated for improving operations of the properties and developing the company's resources in related lines, which will be considered by directors in the near future.

LIFE POLICIES CHANGED

Establishment of June 30 as the deadline for the sale of life insurance containing disability provisions not conforming to the new standards named by the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners has been responsible for intensive sales activity on the part of many local agencies to give their clients an opportunity to take advantage of older types of policies.

While most types of life insurance have been closely standardized for a long period of years, the disability clauses have shown wide variations in the underwritings of different companies. It was to correct these differences and to place the disability provisions on a more satisfactory basis for the entire insurance business that the standard provisions were adopted by the commissioners last September.

In many cases, the older clauses are more advantageous for the purchasers of life insurance than the standard provisions which will become operative after June 30.

Business Today Is Better Than Our Psychology

By B. C. FORBES

MARTIN J. INSULL, president of Middle West Utilities Company and influentially connected with many other important middle-western enterprises, gives me the best comment on conditions and prospects that this column has printed in many moons. See if you don't agree with him. He says:

"My feeling is that our business, taking the country as a whole, is much better than our business psychology. I think comparisons with 1928 would prove the former and our comparisons with 1929 cause the latter. We seem to forget that 1929 was a year of the greatest business the country ever knew, and far above a normal basis. It reached its peak about the middle of the year. So far this year, therefore, we have been comparing with a rising curve. From now on it will be different and our business psychology should improve.

"The fact seems to be that fluctuations—whether booms or depressions—are not as important in the long run as they appear close at hand. The trend of business activity and prosperity is gradually higher year by year, and this is more significant than the short-term changes."

Don't you like that phrase, "our business is much better than our business psychology?"

At least in New York pessimism has been running riot. I am looking forward to getting away from New York next month to enjoy journeying across the continent to the Pacific coast. Wall Street has its nose so close to the stock ticker that a fluctuation of a point or two in leading stocks is regarded as more important than what is happening to agriculture, the industry on which the well being of nearly one-third of our whole population depends.

OWNERS of AMERICAN industries — the stockholders — strikingly revealed how they feel about the tariff when, on Thursday, they immediately sold stocks on the announcement by Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, that he would vote for the tariff bill. It is proverbial that Wall Street can stand anything except uncertainty. Therefore, the removal of the tariff from the realm of uncertainty can hardly fail to have a helpful influence.

DOLEFUL STATEMENTS and statistics need no emphasis—they are only too common. More refreshing is it to receive a note from Pontiac that the General Motors Truck Corporation has established "a new world's record in coach production" by shipping 403 Yellow coaches in May, worth $3,300,000. The company's previous record month, in 1926, was 267. Last year's maximum monthly total was 251.

That's exactly the kind of news this column likes to print at this time, when pessimism is being so distressingly overdone.

THE P. A. BARTLETT Tree Expert Company, with headquarters in Stamford, Conn., and half-a-score branches, takes exception to the statement by the head of another tree expert company that it had nothing beyond local competition and that there was no other company "organized on a national basis." The Bartlett company states that this isn't so, "as you will see from the attached financial statement, tear sheets of our national magazine advertising, list of branch offices and names of prominent clients."

Perhaps it was the fault of the writer of this column. To illustrate an entirely different point, he quoted from the statement made several years ago. In this wonderful country conditions can change greatly in a few years.

HOW'S THIS for doing the handsome thing on a big scale? During the second half of July 69,000 of the 75,000 Western Electric Company employes will go on vacation. Every employe, shop as well as office, gets a vacation with full pay after only one year's service. Last year Western Electric experimented successfully at its main manufacturing plant at Hawthorne, Ill., with a plan for concentrating vacations within a period of two weeks. This plan is being followed this year at its principal plants; during the third and fourth weeks of July the Hawthorne plant will be closed except for emergency and repair work, and the plants at Kearny, N. J., and Baltimore, Md., will be operated with skeleton organizations.

Here's an extraordinary fact, one speaking volumes for the relations existing between the working forces and Western Electric: Of the 30,000 employes at Hawthorne, the company's oldest plant, only 39 shop workers and 24 office workers have been on the payroll less than a year. Everyone else will receive a vacation with pay.

FAST FREEZING TEST STIRS INTEREST

Kelvinator May Shipments Greatest in History; 36% Above May, 1929

Very interesting and remarkable demonstrations of fast freezing are being held at the Kelvinator-Leonard Corporation display rooms, 205 North Highland avenue, East End. These demonstrations are taking place daily until 10:30 p. m. for 10 days. The test is to show how fast boiling water can be cooled in a Kelvinator electric refrigerator.

Boiling water is poured from a tea-kettle into the ice cube tray, which has a thermometer inserted into it. The temperature of the boiling water is 212 degrees. The tray is shoved into its compartment and the thermometer can be seen steadily dropping in temperature. One hundred degrees of heat are taken out of the water in five minutes. Another test is also under way showing that water at a normal temperature is frozen solid in 80 minutes.

MAY SALES RECORD

Kelvinator shipments during the month of May were the greatest in the history of the company, according to H. W. Burritt, vice president in charge of sales. March was the biggest month in shipments in Kelvinator history. April shipments greatly exceeded those of March, again establishing a record. May shipments exceeded both March and April and were 36 per cent over those of May, 1929, making it the greatest month of shipments in the whole history of the Kelvinator Corporation.

Kelvinator domestic sales during the last month have eclipsed all expectations, but along with this record is a great volume of ice cream cabinet sales, commercial equipment for stores, water cooling equipment for offices and factories, and a very substantial increase in export business, all of which combined made May the record Kelvinator business month. The factory has been in regular production continuously during the past nine months.

SUMMER LULL IN BUSINESS

NEW YORK, June 14.—The tide of business activity recedes further as the season of summer slackness progresses, and while industrial indicators are holding up fairly well against the seasonal decline, the latest general trade indicators have weakened along with commodity prices and the stock market, says The Business Week in its report covering the week ending today. The Business Thermometer, index of the general volume of trade and production, has declined again to 90.5 per cent against 92.7 in the week preceding and 108.9 per cent for the corresponding week last year.

Business seems to be knocking off for a long summer vacation, letting things slide till it can formulate its prospects and plans a little more clearly. This will be to the good if it means dropping some outworn formulas and doing some hard, fresh, vigorous thinking about costs, wages, employment, commodity prices, tariff, world trade conditions, agricultural prospects and the banking situation.

Guest Hurt in Auto, Sues for $10,000

Benjamin Merritt, who was a guest rider in the automobile of C. Franklin Brown, in McKeesport and injured about the head, nose, back and other parts of the body, resulting in disfigurement, has sued Brown for $10,000 damages. He claims in his bill of particulars that on June 17, 1928, while Brown was turning his car from Jenny Lind street into Twelfth street, that the car struck a pole and threw him violently, resulting in permanent injuries.

Imports of Plate Glass Increase

Imports of both plate and window glass into this country, during the week ended June 7, registered gains over the preceding week's volume, according to the latest unofficial compilations. In plate glass, incoming shipments for the week totaled 113 cases and 111,550 pounds, compared with 118 cases received the week of May 31. Imports of window glass for the corresponding periods were 1,708 boxes, 85,725 pounds, and 1,059 boxes, respectively.

British Production Of Steel Declines

LONDON, June 14.—Ingot production in Great Britain in May totaled 692,800 tons against 696,100 in April. Pig iron output was 614,500 tons, as against 619,600 in April. Furnaces in blast as of June 1 numbered 141 against 151 on May 1.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

Building Increased in This District

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

BUILDING ACTIVITY in the Pittsburgh district took a turn for the better last month. This was in contrast to the country as a whole which showed further curtailment in construction activity.

An exceptionally high rate of public utility and public works building was an important factor in giving Pittsburgh an increase. While this district in May showed a gain over the preceding month, it was still far behind the corresponding month of last year.

The F. W. Dodge Corporation reports total awards of building contracts in the Pittsburgh district in May of $57,009,100. The Pittsburgh district includes Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky. The May awards were 4 per cent greater than the total of the preceding month of $54,994,900. They compared with $71,472,100 a year ago. For the year to date contracts in this territory totaled $267,336,600 as against $292,858,000 for the corresponding five months of 1929.

Public Words Lead

PUBLIC WORKS and utility building was by far the major type of construction in this district during the month. This class accounted for 36 per cent of all the awards. Residential building amounted to 26 per cent, industrial buildings 14 per cent and commercial buildings 10 per cent. All other types amounted to 14 per cent of the total.

The outlook for the new construction projects in this district shows signs of declining. Work in the contemplated stage in May totaled $65,273,100 as compared with $143,225,500 for the preceding month and $75,047,100 for May, 1929.

Nation Shows Decline

THE ENTIRE GROUP of states covered by the Dodge reports had less favorable results than the Pittsburgh district. The 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains had contracts of $457,416,000 awarded in May. This was 5 per cent below the total of $482,876,700 in the preceding month.

The past month's record was 22 per cent below the May, 1929, total of $587,765,900. For the first five months of the year construction contracts reached $2,037,439,900. This was a decline of 18 per cent from the total of $2,485,655,700 in the corresponding period of 1929.

Commercial Building Lower

FOR THE FIFTH CONSECUTIVE month public works and utilities were the most important of all the classes. This group represented 29 per cent of all awards in May. Residential building was 25 per cent of the total, commercial 16 per cent, industrial 12 per cent and other classes 18 per cent.

The decline in new work contemplated in this district is quite in line with conditions in other parts of the country. The 37 states had $643,405,900 worth of work being planned in May compared with $954,618,300 in April and $847,156,600 in May, 1929.

The only districts showing gains over May, 1929, as well as over April, were upstate New York, the Southeastern territory and the New Orleans territory. Gains over April alone were reported in Southern Michigan, the St. Louis territory and the Cental Northwest.

ARCHITECTS' AND BUILDERS' PERMANENT EXHIBIT AT 514 SEVENTH AVENUE

LOCAL DISPLAY POPULAR

Pittsburghers are enthusiastic over the convenience of the Architects' and Builders' Exhibit at 514 Seventh avenue. The pleasant feature of a visit to this display, which is free to the public, is the fact that there is no sales pressure as no materials are sold at the exhibit. Its purpose is to provide a place where interested persons may inspect new materials and appliances.

The exhibit has space available for combination desk and display room. This has proved to be very useful to distributors and manufacturers' agents.

The Architects' and Builders' Exhibit is a Pennsylvania corporation owned and operated by local men. The advisory board is composed of M. Nirdlinger, appointed by the Pittsburgh Chapter of the American Institute of Architects; R. R. Cappe appointed by the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board, and Wm. P. Trimble, Jr., appointed by the Builders' Exchange.

Building products and appliances are exhibited permanently by 42 manufacturers.

R. G. Dun Reports Failures Gain In 1930

Commercial failures in this district increased in the first five months of this year as compared with the corresponding period of 1929. R. G. Dunn & Company reports 96 failures in the city of Pittsburgh during the first five months. These had assets of $2,356,565 and liabilities of $2,347,324. In the first five months of 1929 there were 79 failures with assets of $858,579 and liabilities of $1,789,894. Allegheny County, outside of Pittsburgh, had 33 failures with assets of $177,459 and liabilities of $449,074, compared with 30 failures a year ago with assets of $175,835 and liabilities of $437,573.

GENERAL TRADE LOWER

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Business for the week ended June 7, as measured by the volume of checks presented for payment, was lower than for the preceding week and below the level of the week ended June 8, 1929, according to Commerce Department.

Wholesale prices, remaining unchanged from the preceding week, were 8 per cent lower than the first week of June, 1929. The composite iron and steel price, advanced slightly over the last week in May, and was 9 per cent lower than the week ended June 8, 1929.

Bank loans and discounts for the week ended June 7 wer 1 per cent greater than the preceding week and 4 per cent greater than the corresponding period last year. Prices for stocks registered declines from both comparative periods. Bond prices, on the other hand, while showing no change from the preceding week, were 2 per cent higher than a year ago.

Interest rates for call money showed no change from a week ago, but were lower than the same period of last year. Time money rates were lower than both the preceding week and a year ago.

Cotton Curtailment Extension Pondered

NEW YORK, June 14. — The cotton goods market has barely held its own since the first of June, the Textile World reports. Few sellers are able to balance sales and production, the publication says, but many are unable to dispose of present curtailed output, and for this reason there has been serious consideration of extending the curtailment program past the mid-July date already contemplated.

Many items in used household equipment, which represent genuine savings, are advertised in the Sun-Telegraph Classified Ads.

RECORD ORDERS FOR CONCRETE

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Reflecting the new high record of concrete surface pavement awards established in April, the volume of construction performed during May increased 30 points above the level of the former month, reaching an index figure of 176, the Associated General Contractors of America announce in a statistical compilation just completed.

The compilation shows that concrete surface pavement awards, as reported by the Portland Cement Association, were for greater yardage than for any April on record, totaling 18,600,000 square yards. Of this total 14,300,000 square yards were for roads and 4,300,000 square yards for streets and alleys.

The record breaking pavement awards, which for the first four months of 1930 totaled 45,750,000 square yards and were running 37 per cent above those for the same period last year, together with the unprecedentedly large volume of long term state and municipal bond issues are taken by E. J. Harding, assistant general manager of the Associated General Contractors, as a trustworthy barometer of the new high levels which public works and engineering construction are certain to reach in 1930.

Purchasing Agents Meet in Chicago

CHICAGO, June 14.—A more liberal buying policy than the rigid hand-to-mouth basis on which American industry has been operating is foreseen by J. R. Whitehead of Fairbanks, Morse & Co., president of the National Association of Purchasing Agents, which opens its annual convention at the Stevens Hotel in Chicago Monday.

The purchasing agents association has 5,000 member purchasing agents in the United States, approximately 2,000 of whom will exchange data on industrial purchasing and business conditions at the convention. Representatives of purchasing organizations in England, France and Mexico will attend, as well as 100 Canadian members of the association.

RETAIL SALES CONTINUE LOWER

Automobile Accessories Reflect Good Demand; Collections Are Slow

Retail trade as a whole continues somewhat below normal for this time of the year, while jobbers of men's and women's wearing apparel report business quiet and materially lower than usual at this season, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review.

Buying of dry goods and notions is comparatively light, most sales being comparatively small in amount and for immediate delivery.

Building construction continues lighter in volume than for several years past and the demand for lumber and other building materials is light. There is a fair demand for automobiles, while automobile accessories appear to be in quite active demand. Groceries and provisions are moving in moderate volume, with prices averaging lower than for a number of years past.

PLUMBING PRICES CUT

Demand for electrical equipment is not as active as a year ago, and electrical fixtures are not very active. The movement of plumbing and heating supplies and sanitary equipment generally continues rather slow and the leading producers have reduced prices 5 to 10 per cent on boilers and radiators and 16⅔ to 18 per cent on the staple lines of bathroom fixtures.

Crude oil production has shown a moderate decrease and efforts are being made to reduce production of Pennsylvania crude oil by 20 per cent.

Production of bituminous coal continues at a somewhat lower rate than a year ago, with demand still slow and prices low. Western Pennsylvania grade of run of mine coal are quoted per net ton at mines as follows: Steam coal, $1.25 to $1.75; gas coal, $1 to $1.75; coking coal, $1.50 to $1.75; steam slack, 90 cents to $1.10; gas slack, $1 to $1.25.

There has been little improvement in collections, which continue to average slow.

Utility Firm Asks O. K. on Bond Issue

CHICAGO, June 14.—Public Service Commission of Northern Illinois has applied to the Illinois Commerce Commission for authority to issue $15,000,000 first lien and refunding mortgage 4½ per cent gold bonds, series E, the proceeds to be used for capital expenditures.

PLATE GLASS TRADE SLOW

The three lines of enterprise upon which the plate glass manufacturing industry largely depends for its market are running behind the average pace for June, according to National Glass Budget. Production of automobiles is materially under the number that were manufactured in the comparative month a year ago. It will be further reduced the last half of this month when the Ford Motor Company's plants in the Detroit district are to be closed down for two weeks. In the three major plants in the Detroit district 108,890 persons are employed.

An unofficial estimate is that the plate glass jobbing business is off in the neighborhood of 30 per cent from normal seasons. The mirror manufacturing industry is also slow.

WINDOW GLASS DEMAND UP

An improvement in the demand for window glass was a feature of this week's developments in the flat glass industry, according to American Glass Review. While not exactly pronounced the greater activity shown, after two exceptionally quiet weeks in the market for this commodity, was naturally welcomed by leading factors and undoubtedly lends encouragement to the situation.

Announcement by the manufacturers this week and last of new window glass discounts is expected to have a stabilizing influence on the market. While the new quotations represent comparatively little change in price trends, the unwieldy discounts previously in effect are materially simplified.

The increase both in the number and size of orders placed with the window glass manufacturers this week was construed in some quarters as an indication of continued greater activity on the part of the jobbing trade for some weeks to come. Stocks in distributors' warehouses, it was pointed out, are low and with recent developments expected to result in a firmer market before long, increased buying in replenishment of stock, as well as for early trade needs, is in order.

Committee Refers Oil Bill to House

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The House Public Lands Committee voted to report out a bill asked by Secretary of the Interior Wilbur to make possible conservation of oil resources in the Kettleman field area of California.

Representative Colton (Rep.) of Utah, chairman, said every effort would be made to obtain passage at this session.

Sale of German Bonds Called Successful

PARIS, June 14.—The immediate success of the first slice of the annuities issue not only in the principal European markets and Paris, London and Berlin, but in neutral countries, has caused great satisfaction in political and financial circles.

French subscriptions exceeded the $100,000,000 allotted to Paris before noon yesterday. Berlin subscribed twice the $9,000,000 Germany was to take, while the $60,000,000 apportioned to London was all subscribed before 1 p. m., when the list was closed.

Advices from Stockholm said that the Swedish allotment was heavily oversubscribed.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Move Up | Local Trading Quiet

MARKET OPENS IRREGULARLY HIGHER

Standard of N. J., United Aircraft, Goodyear and Westinghouse Show Gains

NEW YORK, June 14—(AP.)—Stocks moved irregularly higher at the opening of today's market. International Cement gained 2¼ points, Standard of New Jersey and Goodyear 1. United Aircraft and Westinghouse Electric ¾. Anaconda sank a point to a new 1930 low however and Chesapeake and Ohio lost 1¾ points.

The market was relatively dull but became increasingly irregular as trading progressed and seemed somewhat lowish level. Principal stress of the day seemed unaffected by overnight news of the passage of the tariff measure in the Senate.

The rise in International Cement, however, was attributed directly to the tariff action.

The copper issues fluctuated decidedly weak in selling attributed to new weakness of copper metal prices. Anaconda directors of which meet for dividend action next week declined 2 points to 51, the lowest since 1926. American Smelting and Calumet and Arizona declined 1 1-8 and 4 points respectively. An unconfirmed report that a few large foreign consumers had cancelled their orders for American copper in retaliation for passage of the tariff measure may have contributed to the selling.

United States Steel sagged a point, after opening steady, and Bethlehem was also under moderate pressure.

Allied Chemical lost a point and United States Freight was again a soft spot, dropping 3 points. National Enameling reacted fair to low ground, reflecting omission of the dividend. Trans-Continental Oil rose about 2 points in response to reports of acquisition by Ohio Oil and American Can, Vanadium, Byers, Case and American and Foreign Power gained a point or two.

FOREIGN TRADE FALLS OFF

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The Department of Commerce reports value of merchandise exports for May as $322,000,000 against $384,993,000 in May, 1929 and imports as $285,000,000 in May compared with $400,149,000 in May, 1929.

For five months exports totaled $1,783,156,000 and imports $1,485,959,000 compared with exports of $2,230,441,000 and imports $1,932,953,000 in 1929.

May Crude Rubber Consumption Off

NEW YORK, June 14.—Consumption of crude rubber by United States manufacturers in May totaled 39,902 tons against 50,207 tons in April and 49,233 tons in May 1929.

Imports of rubber in May were 39,745 tons, as against 49,927 in April and 49,180 in May, 1929.

Stocks of crude rubber on hand in the United States on May 31 totaled 146,179 tons, against 148,772 tons April 30 and 97,192 tons on May 31, 1929. Crude rubber afloat for United States ports on May 31 amounted to 68,168 tons against 63,261 tons on April 30 and 65,793 tons May 31, 1929.

WITHDRAWAL CLEARED BY CATCHINGS

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, June 14.—In its present mood, with jumpy nerves, Wall street seeks to make mysteries out of situations that are not at all mysterious.

For example, there has been much mental speculation about the significance of the recent withdrawal of Waddill Catchings, economist and banker, from the presidency of the Goldman, Sachs Trading Corporation. Mr. Catchings' resignation, he explained to me, followed automatically after his withdrawal as a partner of the banking house of Goldman, Sachs & Company, of which he had been a member since 1918. The banking firm has a management contract with the investment trust, which provides that the latter shall be managed by partners of the former.

Mr. Catchings, however, was recently elevated to the chairmanship of the Shenandoah and Blue Ridge Corporations, which are closely allied offspring of the Goldman, Sachs Trading Corporation. These affiliated trusts were started with equal investments by the banking firm, on the one hand, and Harrison Williams, public utility magnate and chief owner of the North American, on the other. Mr Catchings now makes his offices with Mr Williams at 100 Broadway New York. He told me that he regards Shanandoah and Blue Ridge as his life work, and will devote himself to building them up. Goldman Sachs Trading Corporation, he pointed out, which has a heavy interest in the affiliated trusts, will benefit from any improvement in them. Mr. Catchings added that, contrary to rumors, he had retained intact his investment in Goldman, Sachs Trading Corporation, in whose future he professed sound belief.

CLEARS UP RUMORS

This column is not concerned with the future of any of these three affiliated speculative stocks, but is interested in setting forth authoritative data about a situation concerning which unreliable rumors have been afloat.

Mr. Catchings ascribes the recent climax of pessimism, as expressed in the stock market, to disappointment that business is not showing unmistakable signs of improvement at this time. The economist expressed the view that business would continue to drag along for months, but he did say that in the fourth quarter of the year he expected distinct improvement in general business. Mr. Catchings said that under the surface one important curative factor is at work—easy money—and that, given time, cheap money would restore prosperity, just as last year dear money had checked good times and brought on recession.

The banker and economist said that he thought that the stock market would not wait for business to turn upward, but would undertake to anticipate the change. Apart from cheap money, Mr. Catchings thought that the business situation would be relieved by a disposition of the tariff matter one way or the other. Personally, he thought it would be best to pass the bill, and get it definitely off the national agenda. He added, however, that what the rates are do not make so much difference. But that uncertainty concerning prospective changes in schedules ruthlessly holds up business.

Although President Hoover's business stabilization program resembled the ideal plan set forth for averting depressions in Mr. Catching's book, "The Road to Plenty," Mr. Catchings told me that he was skeptical about the practical effects of the executive's efforts.

MIGHT HURT RECOVERY

Mr. Catchings said that he thought the President had made a magnificent gesture, but had not followed it through with sufficiently profound analysis and action. Accordingly, he thought that the program which induced companies to make heavy capital expenditures at a time when they failed to show immediate results might later delay recovery by inducing a super-caution on the part of the same executives.

Business has shown gains that are only seasonal in character in recent weeks. That fact has proved disappointing to bull speculators, but real investors, in assessing in their own mind the true worth of a stock, consider average annual earnings for a period of years, and also the long term future prospects. The market is a ruthless extremist that is perpetually exaggerating the effects of prosperity and depression. He who runs with the crowd is a victim of its excesses.

Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, has again shown his confidence in American banking talent by choosing Prof. O. M. Sprague, of Harvard University, as his personal advisor, to succeed Walter Stewart, an American expert, who has returned to New York to take over the chairmanship of Case, Pomeroy & Co., a private investing institution. By the way, the company has withdrawn as the chief sponsor of Southern Railway and is now especially interested in Rhodesian copper ventures.

One of the New York trust companies has shown enterprise in creating a special custodianship of securities for investors who are away on vacations.

Increase in Stockholder Lists Lessens Floating Supply of Stocks.

Many hold that the recent action of the market, particularly the sharp rise at the close Tuesday and Wednesday when the shorts started to cover, bears out the theory that the floating supply of the popular common stocks is not as plentiful as a year ago. Hundreds of thousands of new shareholders have been added to the lists of the various corporations since October, 1929, and that means that hundreds of thousands of shares have been taken from the hands of speculators. Wider margins on which stocks are held also help to make stocks scarce.

One industry that has not suffered from depression is the sulphur industry, but the stocks of the sulphur companies have not reflected this. It is officially stated that sulphur shipments are holding up to what they were a year ago. That indicates earnings will compare favorably with the first half of 1929. Shareholders of Texas Gulf Sulphur still are confident they will get an extra before the end of the year, as cash has been accumulating rapidly since January 1.

In the recent slump many of the oil stocks held much better than some others, and there seems to be good reason, for oil statistically, is in a more favorable position than it has been in many months. Last week, production fell 21,400 barrels daily. It is now 2,588,050 barrels daily, 136,400 barrels daily less than it was a year ago. At this time last year, daily production was 15 per cent larger than on the corresponding date of the preceding year. Gasoline consumption is running about 10 per cent ahead of what it was a year ago.

On the theory that a goodly number of stocks have dropped, not only to new low levels for the year, but some of them to levels below those reached last november, some of the more experienced observers are confident that a substantial rally is in the making. They believe that the recent heavy selling has witnessed the passing of much hitherto weakly held stock to strong hands, this tending to stiffen materially the technical position of the list. Those observers hold that the worst of forced liquidation has been seen and that likewise the unsettling influence of the tariff question will soon be over, paving the way for a good turn.

The feature of yesterday's market from a disinterested point of view was not the sporadic strength that developed in various directions, but rather the marked slackening of selling pressure which had recently been on the general run of stocks. Whether this development was to have been regarded as indicating completion of persistent liquidation which had been forcing stocks back steadily for the last 10 days, or whether it was to be taken merely as a lull in the selling movement remained to be seen. But it was generally conceded that even if we are in a more prolonged downward trend, the market is at least entitled to periodical rallies which are experienced even in a bear market.

Further concessions reported being made by custom smelters in the price of copper metal yesterday naturally did not tend to help the red metal shares marketwise. Leading producers took cognizance of weakness that developed Thursday by reducing the export price to 13 cents a pound from 13.30-cent level in force heretofore. Domestic delivery is regularly quoted ¼ cent below the export level by leading producers, but custom smelters were reported yesterday to be offering the metal as low as 12 cents a pound. Weakness no doubt reflected in a measure the sharp decline reported in the London market, where the price was off £1 a ton for spot and future electrolytic copper.

Continental Oil Co. Plans Development

NEW YORK, June 14.—Plans for extensive developments in Northwestern and Canadian territory are being made by Continental Oil Company, in which Rockefeller and Morgan interests predominate, it is reported in Wall street. The plan involves construction and acquisition of new refineries in which the Imperial Oil Company, Canadian corporation of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, is strongly entrenched.

Transcontinental Ohio Oil Deal Rumored

NEW YORK, June 14.—(AP.)—Reports are current in Wall street that announcement would be made next Monday of the terms by which Ohio Oil Company would absorb Transcontinental Oil Company, on the probable basis of one share of Ohio for each 3½ shares of Transcontinental. Negotiations have been going on for some time.

Producing properties in the Yates field, Pecos County, Texas, with potential daily output exceeding 2,900,000 barrels, or about half of the field's total, are controlled jointly by Transcontinental Oil, and Mid-Kansas Oil and Gas, a subsidiary of Ohio Oil.

Production of the two companies, it is said, has been limited to around 63,000 barrels daily, due to proration agreements.

The basis of the merger is said to be 3½ shares of Transcontinental for 1 of Ohio Oil.

Marion Davies Fashion Contest Will End At Midnight

Almost a last-minute entry was a letter from Vienna, Austria. Others have been received from Italy, Spain and Mexico.

Whether or not the writers have seen Miss Davies' latest picture, "The Florodora Girl," they are none the less interested in the discussion of the styles of the gay nineties and those of today.

The contest, in which two prizes of $500 each will be awarded—one to a man, the other to a woman writer—will close promptly at midnight tonight.

Owing to the hundreds of letters still arriving daily, it will be several days before the judges will be able to decide upon the winners.

STAGE INFLUENCES STYLES

"The styles are always influenced in some degree by the costumes worn in a popular theatrical production and those worn in "The Florodora Girl," will inevitably influence the styles of the near future, but I feel sure the adaptation will be only their most pleasing and sensible motives, while the presentation of the absurdities of the mode will nip any incipient tendency towards the serious revival of the devices which were formerly supposed to enhance the loveliness of woman.

"BLANCHE BATCHELLER,
"541 Steiner street, San Francisco, Cal."

TODAY'S GIRLS MODEST

"Believe it or not, the cut, fit or length of a dress has nothing to do with morals. Today's young girls are as modest as their mothers and grandmothers when attired in longer skirts.

"MRS. WILLIAM H. SCHWARTZ,
"5029 Eleventh avenue, Seattle, Wash."

KNEES FAVORED

"If the sight of a woman's knee still offends and shocks some members of the Genus Homo Sapiens, may the day soon dawn when knees of every sort shall be known for what they are per se.

"MRS. PEARL L. WEBER,
"4219 Davenport street, Omaha, Neb."

WOMEN HELD BACK

"It is utterly amazing to me that any of our modern women could want the fashions of the gay nineties to return. Such a style relapse would be a refutation of everything the woman of today has achieved. It would be an anachronism. It was such form of dress that had been responsible for her merely being a spectator in an active world instead of a participant.

"MRS. S. S. WYLER,

"1226 Pratt boulevard, Chicago, Ill."

DON'T WANT TOMBOYS

"FRANCIS LESSAR,
"41(John road, Detroit, Mich."

FREE FROM BONDAGE

"A slave once freed does not readily replace his shackles. With the attainment of her economic independence, woman has at last escaped from bondage and, having escaped, is as likely to return to that uncomfortable condition as she is to light her home with oil lamps.

"KATHARINE M. MURRAY,

Anne Does Not Approve of Married Life

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Larry Eaton, president of the Eaton Advertising Agency, is puzzled by the strange actions of his secretary, Janet Andrews, who has been in his employ for five years. When Miss Andrews starts to cry while taking dictation from him, Eaton allows her to go home for the rest of the day. Eaton then decides to get a new secretary. He plans to give Miss Andrews a long leave of absence and get pretty Anne Murdock to work in her place. Miss Murdock is secretary to the vice president of the concern. When Anne hears about the proposed change she is delighted. Anne proves that she can do the new work efficiently. Anne's sister, Kathleen, announces to the family that she has a new job as chorus girl. Her father disapproves. Ted O'Hara, who works with the agency, loves Ardith and wants her for his wife. She explains to him that she prefers a business career. When Janet sends in her resignation Anne accepts the secretarial position. The Eatons, married a long time, are still fond of each other. Their interests, however, are vastly different. Anne visits their home to help Mrs. Eaton do some clerical work for a charity affair. She is amazed by the beautiful furnishings.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER IX.

Presently Linda came back, wearing a jade-green tea gown of chiffon velvet, severely cut, with only the fall of lace at throat and sleeves to soften it. She was smoking, and she looked radiant and happy.

"Was I too long?" she asked apologetically. "Did you find something to read?"

Anne nodded and indicated the book of short stories she held.

"I didn't get very far into it," she confessed, and explained: "I was admiring the room."

"It is nice," agreed Linda. "I like it a lot. Do you smoke?"

"Now and then; not often."

"Well, you're better off without it; you'll save your pretty skin," commented Linda. "And now"—she drew up a chair to the long library table and produced a typewritten list of names, envelopes, stamps and cards—"this is where I need your help."

She explained to Anne that these were appeals to be sent out in a charity drive for several hospitals.

"It's not hard," said Linda, "but volunteer workers are the supreme limit. Of course I could have sent this to you at the office, but I didn't want to take your time from your work. I thought you'd get through here more quickly and with fewer interruptions." She gave Anne the material and, after further instructions, led her to a small square room off the library where there were books and flowers and a desk with a portable typewriter.

"You can work here quietly," she said. "It is Mr. Eaton's workroom. He works here at night, to my despair. Now, I have a fitting. I'll be back later to see how you're coming on and we'll have tea."

Linda Friendly

She smiled and departed. Anne settled herself at the desk and looked after her employer's wife thoughtfully. She liked her. She had decided that at once. Yet, thought Anne oddly, for all her warmth of manner and natural good humor, you might be Linda's best friend and live beside her for fifty years and never get to know her well. She was so—self-contained.

Anne could not imagine Mrs. Eaton staging a scene, losing her head or her temper, or in any way putting herself at a disadvantage in any situation.

Sighing unconsciously, she turned to her work.

Shortly before 5 Mrs. Eaton returned, followed by a manservant. She stood in the archway of the workroom while the tea service was being arranged near the fireplace.

"Well, how goes it?" she asked cheerfully.

"Finished just this minute," Linda praised sincerely. "Now, come and have a cup of tea."

Anne watched the long capable hands pour the tea into fragile cups. Linda talked on casually.

"These committees are such a nuisance. I inherited them from my mother—somehow I keep on with them—I don't know why!"

She was friendly. She might have been pouring tea for a woman of her own circle. She had the rare faculty of setting people at their ease.

Questioned About Polly

"By the way," Linda went on, "there's a woman on this committee whose sister is employed in the agency. Miss Ames. I've meant to ask Mr. Eaton about her. Do you know her by any chance?"

She is trying to make me comfortable by talking about things which she knows interest me, thought Anne.

Aloud, she answered: "I think so, if it is Polly Ames you mean. I know her slightly."

"What does she do?" asked Linda, with genuine interest.

"She's in the art department. She does—oh, borders, lettering, that sort of work. She's really quite clever," Anne explained.

"I don't understand much about advertising," admitted Mrs. Eaton without regret.

"Tell me, what does she look like?"

Anne, slightly astonished, thought the question over. "Well she answered, after a moment, "she's pretty; she has fair curly hair and a round face; she's rather short and inclined to lots of curves."

"I see." Linda chuckled to herself. "I asked because this sister of hers is so amazing. One of these spare, lean women who wear men's straw hats and dinner jackets."

"Dinner jackets?" Anne asked amused.

"Well, practically. Very utilitarian, I should say. Rather Miss Andrews' type, only much more so. She must be 40-odd—old enough to be her sister's mother from your description. She is a social-service worker and one of the more professional members of the committee."

Anne listened while Linda talked of the hospital work. She was entertained by the introduction of Polly Ames into the conversation. Anne had not thought of Polly for weeks. She saw her rarely but, according to Betty Howard, Polly was smitten with young O'Hara. However, when Anne had accused him of turning the girl's curly head—through sheer idle mischief, not believing it and not caring particularly if it were true—Ted had grown embarrassed and had flushed as red as his hair.

As a matter of record, he was rather involved with little Polly, who lived in the village under the austere guardianship of her sister. Polly was an excellent cook, and it was to her he went for an occasional home supper and also for soft consolation upon those evenings when Anne had no time for him.

Polly was restful even if she was "artistic." She had soft eyes and softer ways. She clung and had no strong code concerning kissing. Yet she was circumspect, discreet.

Visits Brother

She was a "home girl"—a girl who frankly admitted that earning a living was a necessity, not a pleasure. She showed Ted sketches she had made of pretty, impossible cottages smothered in roses, with fat little chimneys from which smoke rose to a cloudless sky. She called these "my dream castles."

After tea Ann took her departure. Linda shook hands with her and remarked absently, as she pulled on her hat, "You have lovely hair. It's a pity to hide it." At the door she added: "Thank you again. You've taken a load from my shoulders, Miss Murdock, and I'm most grateful to you."

Nothing patronizing there; nothing consciously superior. Yet Anne was distinctly and unhappily aware of the situation—Employer's Wife and Husband's Secretary. "I'm too darned sensitive," she accused herself, "and it's so silly!"

She did not go home at once, but went instead to her brother's apartment for dinner. She arrived there tired and conscious of mental letdown.

"If it isn't the little Business Woman!" he exclaimed, his arm heavy about her shoulders. "What you been doing this afternoon? Putting Somebody's Superior Soap on the advertising map?"

Jim Good-Hearted

"No, I've been getting out charity appeals for Mrs. Eaton and feeling," Anne said, immediately restored to spirits, "rather like an object of charity myself."

"How come?" Jim pulled her into the living room and removed her hat and coat.

"Oh, I don't know. Just me, I guess."

"Well, sit down. Have a pipe? Have a cigaret? Have two? The missus is out in the kitchen. She'll be along presently. Let's have a look at you. Haven't seen you for a week."

He smiled down at her, perched on the arm of her chair. He looked very like his sister, and when he smiled at her his eyes were as darkly blue as her own.

Anne smiled back. She was fond of Jim. "How's tricks?" she wanted to know.

"Rotten. Hasn't been a good murder in a couple of days," he answered gloomily. "If some one doesn't shoot somebody soon, or drink poison, or dig up a scandal, or unearth some graft, I'll be out of a job."

He was an alert young person, a favorite on his tabloid. He had started in as a cub reporter but was now assigned to the more sensational cases, signing occasional articles. He made good money and spent every cent of it. He gambled it and he drank it, but most of it he gave away. Any one who needed a ten-spot could touch Jim Murdoch for it and get it.

Sara Works Hard

Sara, his wife, called to Anna from the kitchen: "Come in, will you, Anne? I've got my hands full."

Anne went in. Sara was shutting the oven door, a fretful baby in her arms. She wore a bungalow apron over her pretty frock. On one round wrist there was an angry burn.

She dumped the baby into Anne's arms. "Take, Pete, will you? I've set the table and just as soon as I take the pudding out I'll put him to bed. He's teething and cross as the dickens, bless him."

Anne cuddled Pete, who was fat and warm. He was a heavy baby, gay and frolicsome when normal, but heavy-eyed and feverish now. He had his mother's dark eyes and his father's blonde hair. His brother, 18 months Pete's senior, called sleepily from his crib.

"Give Junior a drink of water do!" implored Sara, distracted.

Later they sat down to dinner, both babies tucked away and quiet for the moment. Sara regarded Anne enviously.

"You look cool, Anne," she said.

"Why not? It's cold as sin outside."

"I don't mean that. It's just that I'm always fussing about something." She pushed the dark hair away from her eyes and laughed.

"I've told her to get some one in," Jim complained. "She frets herself to death and she needn't. We can afford help."

Disapproves of Jim

"None that I can trust with the babies," his wife said. "We've had in a succession of incompetent colored women for cleaning and looking after the children. They're more worry than they're worth. But I have one now who takes the kids out in the afternoons."

Sara elevated her charming nose, a little shiny now from the heat of the kitchen. "You should know!" she said scornfully. "It's better than being at the beck and call of some man who doesn't care whether you live or die!"

"Well, I'll take the man and an office and no hot stoves and my pay envelope any day in the week," Anne told her, laughing.

Jim grinned at his wife. Sara had been a filing clerk before their marriage.

"She's more to be pitied than scorned, isn't she?" he asked, but Anne sighed.

Sara's narrow, anxious life seemed to her so tragic. Jim and his careless expenditures, his happy-go-lucky existence, appeared so futile, so wrong to his sister. She, the outsider, away from domestic responsibilities, looked at the husband and wife with concern. "Would nothing ever make them see how handicapped they were?" she thought.

Pities Sara

"You'll think differently some day," Sara told her, as if she had read her sister-in-law's mind.

"Of course she will," Jim said. "We're pretty well fixed and dashed happy, even if we bicker occasionally just like the wealthy—aren't we, Sara?" he asked, looking across at his wife.

Later, as Anne was leaving, Sara drew her into the bedroom, lowering her voice in order not to awaken the children.

"Sorry I was upset tonight," she apologized, "but things piled up and I was so rushed. And I don't feel awfully well. I think I'm going to have another baby," she explained gallantly.

"Sara—another!" cried Anne.

"Oh, it's no use scolding and being horrified," Sara said patiently. "You'd understand if you were married."

Pete woke and cried out. His mother went in to him and came back, looking prophetically haggard.

"I'm in for a night of it," she said with resignation. "And I'm so tired."

"Couldn't Jim—?"

"Jim has to go out," said Sara.

On the way home Anne pondered. Her tired mind unrolled shifting and kaleidoscopic pictures before her mental vision: the library in the Eatons' apartment, the books and flowers, outward and visible signs of expensive, ordered, cultured living, and Jim's flat that all Sara's care couldn't keep trim. Sara shouldn't have married; she had been better off working. She's been good at her job, minor though it had been, and she had loved it.

Thinks of Marriage

Sara and her two babies and perhaps another to come; Jim and his drinking, his mistaken generosity, Jim who was so clever but who never would get far because he couldn't say no.

"You'd understand if you were married."

"Married!" thought Anne, with contempt and a sort of blind terror. "Not me! Not much!"

Yet she remembered the interchange of glances between Jim and his wife; quick it had been, but warm and secret—and disturbing. She wondered if Linda Eaton sometimes looked at her husband in that way, as if she saw him for the first romantic time and yet had known him always. But then, Linda and Lawrence Eaton were different. They knew nothing of this economic pressure, of the demands of babies, the selfish, beloved demands.

And that set her to wondering whether Lawrence Eaton and his wife had ever wanted children; whether they missed not having them.

Reaching home, she put her idle speculations aside and managed a laugh to herself and her anxiety about her brother's little family. "Sara wouldn't thank me," she thought as she fitted her key in the lock. "But if she expects me to follow her example, she's mistaken."

Marriage? A greater gamble than ever nowadays, thought Anne. To undertake it as the sheltered girl marrying the eligible man was one thing; to undertake it as a girl earning her living, her choice among eligibles generally limited to men on the difficult make, that was another—and too great a risk.

PLAZA, NIXON DENY CHARGES

The proprietors of the Nixon cafe and Plaza restaurant deny their establishments are maintained as common nuisances.

The denials were made in answers they filed yesterday in Federal Court to bills of complaint of Administrator J. D. Pennington May 19, in which he asks for permanent "padlock" injunctions. The latter charged liquor was "kept" on the premises in violation of the prohibition law.

E. S. Bromeier, proprietor of the Plaza restaurant, and Antonio Conforti and Andrew Tucci, proprietors of the Nixon cafe, made general denials of the charges. A denial was also made by E. E. Beeck, co-trustee of the Plaza Building, named in the suit as owner.

Attached to the bills of complaint are affidavits charging employes of the restaurants served cracked ice and ginger ale to patrons who brought liquor. The proprietors or their employes are not accused of selling liquor.

The day the suits were filed Judge R. M. Gibson denied motions for preliminary injunctions, but set June 23 for final hearings. At that time Attorney Humes declared that the administrator had asked the proprietors of the restaurants to co-operate with him by requesting patrons to keep liquor in their pockets or under tables.

In each of the three answers filed the court is asked to dismiss the suits.

'XY' TRAFFIC PLAN WINNING

Frank L. Dugan, general chairman of the Better Traffic Committee, said today that the committee is satisfied with the compromise "XY" plan of street intersections in the vicinity of the new Pennsylvania Railroad station and Federal Building. He said he expected ordinances making the plan possible would be introduced in City Council Monday.

The recommendation of the committee to council May 8 covering the relocation of streets in the vicinity of the new buildings, including the intersections of Eleventh street and Penn avenue and of Grant street and Liberty avenue, was:

"That the city should assure the acquisition of the land necessary to fix the general lines of the "Z" Plan with the understanding that at first a properly devised surface arrangement may be executed and still allow the execution in the future of a grade separation scheme if and when it is found to be necessary."

STAGE SET FOR TUNNEY OR DEMPSEY

It isn't very hard to guess what will be the nature of the next chapter in the story of the passing of the heavyweight fistic championship from the United States. No doubt it will announce a decision by Jack Dempsey or Gene Tunney to return to the ring for the purpose of trying to bring the title back to the United States. There couldn't be a better time or situation for a comeback by Dempsey or Tunney if the stage had been set to order, and it is difficult to believe that the smart business men of the game will allow such a golden opportunity to slip by.

Jack Dempsey.

The possibility of Tunney's coming out of retirement may not be as remote as has been generally supposed. Gene is said to have intimated to close friends only a few days ago that he might "take a notion to fight again" in the event that the title left America, and now that it has been lost in a manner that was not decisive an ideal opening is provided for him if he has any serious intention of returning to action.

THE FORMER CHAMPION gave everybody to understand when he retired that he was quitting the ring for good, but Jim Jeffries said the same thing when he relinquished the title a quarter of a century ago, only to change his mind later in an unsuccessful attempt to bring the championship back to the white race. The only difference is that Tunney no longer needs the money, and is pleased to consider himself as belonging to a social sphere that has little in common with the prize ring.

Otherwise there are fewer obstacles in the way of a comeback by Tunney than Jeffries had to surmount. Though Jeff did not retire until 1905, he had not fought since his battles with Bob Fitzsimmons, Jim Corbett and Jack Munroe in 1902, so that he had been out of action eight years when he returned to meet Jackson in 1910. Tunney has been idle only two years.

JEFFRIES WAS 35 when he came back, whereas Tunney is only 32. Besides, undertaking to meet Johnson was a much bigger contract than would be one to take away from Max Schmeling the title that was handed to him on a foul.

If Tunney is unwilling to take his gloves off the shelf, it is unlikely that the same difficulty will be experienced in inducing Dempsey to don his fighting togs again.

Jim Jeffries.

IT IS NO secret that Jack has been considering a comeback for some time, awaiting only a favorable opportunity for a match that would mean a big gate. He is said to have had Primo Carnera in mind for a time, but whether or not that plan has been abandoned an even bigger plum looms now in a match with Schmeling, in which the old patriotic stuff and international ballyhoo can be worked to the limit. They'll fiddle around and deny it for a time, but it looks like a safe guess that sooner or later Dempsey or Tunney will be in there fighting the German.

ONE OUT OF three appears to be the limit of the Pirates' capabilities on the present Eastern trip. They've made the same record at all three stops so far—Brooklyn, Boston and New York—sending them into Philadelphia today for the final series with a record of only three games won against six lost on the cruise.

Yesterday's game was the eleventh dropped to the Giants in the last 13 meetings and the fifth defeat in seven clashes with New York this year. It was the third defeat of the season at the hands of Bill Walker, and the third time that the McGrawites have beaten Larry French.

AMONG BASEBALL'S MOST remarkable veterans is Sam Rice, star outfielder, hitter and baserunner of the Senators, whose individual work has had much to do with putting Washington in the pennant hunt this year.

Sam never batted higher than .350 in previous campaigns, yet here he is, at the age of 38 and in his sixteenth major season, leading the American League batters with an average close to .400 and ranking second only to Babe Ruth in runs scored.

Sam Rice.

AND HE CALLS hitting "just plain, unadulterated luck!" "Take my case, for instance," he says. "Here I am older than ever and past the normal retirement age. Still I keep on swinging and I am getting more hits than I ever got before. If you're a good swinger and have a lot of luck you're going to hit the ball 'where they ain't,' and that's that. All pitchers are tough for me, but when I get up in the morning feeling luck, none of them is tough enough to stop me. Why, a batter can go four days and hit 'em just as hard as on any other day and not get one safe. Then he'll do the same thing the very next day and have a harvest."

CLEVELAND YESTERDAY CLIMAXED the latest sensational drive in the American League by trouncing the A's for the third time in succession and supplanting the Mackmen in first place. Between the Senators and the Indians, with the Yankees yet to be heard from, the Athletics' dream of a walk-in for another pennant has just been about broken up.

The Indians reached the peak by winning seven games in a row while the world champions were losing five out of seven. The A's have now lost four in succession. Cleveland has won 10 of the last 11 and 14 of the last 17 contests. It is only the third club to hold undisputed possession of first place in the American League this season. Philadelphia and Washington were the others. The A's had held the leaderships since June 1.

THE INDIANS HOLD a record not equal by any other club in either of the major leagues. They have not been worsted by any other team in the season's competition, having an edge on all rivals except the Yankees, with whom they have split even in two tilts.

Peckinpaugh's outfit has taken four of seven games from the Athletics, three out of four from the Senators, four out of seven from

JOHNNIES WIN IN 13TH

It took the league-leading Johnstown team 13 innings to down Fairmont at Fairmont yesterday in the Mid-Atlantic League, but the Johnnies turned the trick, winning, 5 to 2, with a four-run rally in the final inning.

At Jeannette, the Jays added to Wheeling's woes, winning by a 7 to 6 score. Scottdale won over Cumberland, 10 to 5, at Scottdale, and at Charleroi, the Clarksburg Generals handed the Guys their fifth setback in a row, 5 to 2.

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League contenders will meet in complete program of cavorting today, the afternoon's fun marking the last get-together of loop rivals until after the forty-second Western Pennsylvania championships, which get under way at Stanton Heights just one week hence. Inasmuch as last Saturday's affair left the circuit situation tightly tangled, especially in Section I, where P. A. A., Edgewood and Mount Lebanon stand in triple tie at the top, the impending contests loom as tussles bitterly to be fought and it is quite probable that this evening will find radical shifting in the relative positions of the entrants.

The most interesting upper sector joust on the card would appear to be that of the champion Edgewood array with Jimmy Creighton's rehabilitated South Hills delegation on the latter's lot. The Hill-toppers have already kicked in with two striking surprises by holding the crack Stanton Heights outfit to a 5-4 win and by stepping out to trim University Club by a tally identical with the Heights setback. Further, 'tis rumored that West Penn titleholder Byron Baur will grace the Hills line-up against Edgewood, though this is by no means official dictum and will have to be seen to be altogether credited.

MAY UPSET DOPE

At any rate, Edgewood will be forced to flash fancy tennis to score decisive win over the Creightonites and it is not beyond the bounds of possibility that South Hills, with Baur, Jimmy O'Connor, the McCabe boys, Jake Olko, Bill Creighton, and Thomas on deck might take a fall out of the premiers.

Meanwhile down at Beaver Falls, P. A. A., chief foe of Edgewood in the titular race, will hurl a patched-up squad into action with Howdy Campbell's College Hill crew. Capt. Dave O'Loughlin of the Winged Head is leaving tonight for the East where he will compete on grass in the Delaware state and national intercollegiate tournaments the next fortnight and will again be absent from the Red and Gray troup. Al Bialas, veteran O'Loughlin follower, will also be out of the going, a severe cold having descended upon him and relegated him to the sidelines. This means that John and Billy O'Loughlin will head the visiting list, with Glaser, Lauler, McLain and Sullivan stringing along.

University Club should put up a hot fracas at Stanton Heights in another important Section I engagement. The teams are pretty

TOMORROW—THIS IS A FAST WORLD.

A. M. A. TITLE MEET TODAY

Champions who won their crowns in last year's record-breaking meet will find the going exceedingly rocky today as they attempt to retain their laurels in the annual A. M. A. championship track and field meet in the Pitt Stadium.

The competition promises to be keen in every event. At least half a dozen of the champions crowned last year (there were 10 of 'em in all), will be on hand for today's event, and will include Henry Schnellback in the dashes, Lewis and Esaman in the hurdles; Watkins in the half-mile, Miller in the 440, Pesci in the mile, Cooper in the high jump, Brownlee in the discus and Friedman in the javelin.

MARKS MAY FALL

The list of records also may expect a good going over. Friedman is almost a certain bet to set a new mark in the javelin, and Marshall Lewis, clever timbertopper, will go after a new mark in the high hurdles.

Pesci, Duquesne University's ace distance man and a member of the crack P. A. A. array, is primed for a record shattering run in the mile. Jimmy Watkins, pressed as he will be by Rob Roy in the 880, may set a new standard in this event.

COOPER FACES TEST

Cooper, Pitt's freshmen star, and Spencer, of Fifth Avenue High School, are expected to stage a thrilling duel for high jump honors, and are both accorded a chance of bettering the present mark for the event, six feet five and three-eighths inches, held by Bill Robusch of the P. A. A.

The P. A. A. team is favored to retain the team championship it has held for the past three years.

Joe Jacobs Real Heavy Champion, Keck Says

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

Do you believe in miracles?

In picking Jack Sharkey to defeat Max Schmeling, this writer, in last Sunday's issue, wrote that only through a miracle could Schmeling hope to win.

Was there ever a closer approach to a miracle in the ring than the foul blow that tossed the heavyweight championship of the world into his lap when he was hopelessly beaten from the start and only a round or two away from a crushing knockout defeat?

JACOBS WON TITLE

The real heavyweight champion of the world, believe it or not, is Joe Jacobs, American manager of Schmeling, although he is a little fellow and probably doesn't weigh more than 150 pounds. It was Jacobs who finished the job of completely upsetting the already badly rattled Jimmy Crowley, referee of the Sharkey fight, when the latter did not know what to do because he had not seen the blow complained about by Schmeling.

Jumping into the ring as the bell struck a few seconds after Schmeling went groveling to the floor, Jacobs flatly demanded that the bout be given to his man on a foul.

Ranting and raving, he pursued the referee from one side of the ring to another, meanwhile instructing the other seconds of the German not to permit him to come out of his corner again. At one stage, he ordered them to take him out of the ring—before the decision was announced.

When Johnny Buckley, manager and chief second of Sharkey, joined in the wild scene in the ring, the referee was in one of the worst jams in the history of the sport, with pressure coming from both sides.

If Luis Firpo had had Joe Jacobs, or a man like him, in his corner the night he knocked Jack Dempsey out of the ring, he, too, would have won the title.

REFEREE INFLUENCED

The chances are that, left to his own devices, Referee Crowley would have tried to find some way out of the difficulty. He might have given Schmeling a rest to recuperate and warned Sharkey that any further infractions of the rules would be penalized by prompt disqualification.

As matters went, American sportsmanship was vindicated in that a foreign challenger got the break.

But the fact remains that the better man did not win, and so the result becomes a travesty.

THE LOWDOWN ON THE BUCS

By THE BENCHWARMER.

PHILADELPHIA, June 14.—Well, folks, maybe it's a case of water findin' its own level—this second division stuff, but there's a lot of fellas on this club that won't admit it. Perhaps we are a second-division outfit with Lloyd out and several others only half ready, but there'll be a lot of mad Pirates around if we finish in the second tier.

We stayed around the top for more than a month with Pie and Lloyd both out because the gang was hustlin' and we're still full of fight. Erv Brame was back on the mound for an inning yesterday for the first time in more than a month and he had plenty of stuff. When he and Steve Swetonic went down I think that meant a few games that would be on the other side of the ledger.

If we could have taken those Giants in the last game all of us would be feelin' better today. I guess we're just naturally weak against southpaws because we were trimmed by Hubbell and Walker and we took Fred Fitzsimmons for a buggy ride.

The Giants look like the best team in the league to us. The way that infield can rip off double plays, McGraw mich' be able to cop with a twilight league pitching staff. Critz made us moan in gettin' in front of balls that had base hits tickets.

I had a good time in New York, but, you don't enjoy things when you're gettin' licked.

REYNOLDS WINS

CINCINNATI, June 14.—(AP.)—Jack Reynolds, world champion welterweight, last night successfully defended his title by taking the last two falls in the feature wrestling bout here from Billy Hallas, Dallas, Tex. Reynolds weighed 148½; Hallas 148.

PHILADELPHIA, June 14. — The celebrated and somewhat notorious Baker Bowl will echo with baseball for the whole of this afternoon, if the weather permits. Jewel Ens led his Pirate.. into the City of Brotherly Lov: last night and this morning the Buccaneers were all set for a bargain bill with Burt Shotton's hard-hitting, but otherwise inconsistent nine.

The early twin engagement of the Pirates in Philadelphia was a premeditated thing, it having no relation to postponements for the obvious reason that the Pittsburghers are making their bow here. When the schedule was drafted the double-header was arranged. It may be that the draft makers figured that a twin bill was necessary to attract the fans, anyhow it's on the schedule and the Pirates are eager to run it off.

SPENCER, CHAGNON SET

Manager Ens is likely to stick in right handers in his choice of sharpshooters for the dual attraction. Ens probably will use the youthful Leon Chagnon in the prelude, with Glenn Spencer or Heinie Meine available for the second contest. He leans toward Spencer and it may be that the hard-hitting Quakers will have to look at the two young righthanders. Manager Shotton has Sweetland, Collins, Collard and one or two others ready to twirl for the home team.

There was a sour taste in the mouths of the Pirates as they pulled out of New York last night. The Bucs dropped the final game of the series with the Giants, the setback making the Pirates look anything but impressive on the present tour. Playing three games each in Brooklyn, Boston and New York, the Freebooters were able to win but one of each series, so that their card, when they landed here, showed only three triumphs as against twice as many defeats. Yesterday's score was 7 to 2.

Four games are listed in the last series, single games being scheduled for Monday and Tuesday.

WALKER TOO GOOD

Southpaw Bill Walker held the Pirates to six hits at the Polo Grounds yesterday as the Giants

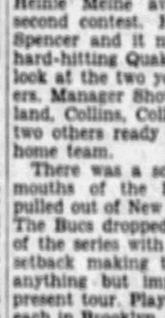
Nick Altrock Says:



ST. LOUIS, June 14.—I got a good suggestion for the next time Jack Sharkey fights. Put Bill Klem or some other good umpire in the ring to call all the fouls, then there won't be any dispute whether a blow went this side or that side of the foul line. I got another suggestion for improving the fight game too. When the bout Nick Altrock is scheduled for 15 rounds the customers should get rain checks if there's a foul before the end of seven and a half rounds that would stop 'em. If Sharkey only got one purse for fighting a double-header with Schmeling, Jack would have been so careful he wouldn't have hit below Maxie's Adam's apple.

INDIANS CRUSH A'S TO TAKE LEAGUE LEAD

REDS DEFEAT ROBINS; CUBS, BRAVES WIN

Associated Press.

The Cleveland Indians, picked to finish no higher than fourth place in the American League pennant race, today are out in front after a whirlwind dash to the top that has left the remainder of the clubs and the Athletics in particular, groggy.

With a championship brand of pitching and a murderous attack, the Indians yesterday rolled up their seventh straight victory and their third over the world champions to go into the lead by four points.

WALLOP MACKS

As if to make their advance into the leadership even more impressive, the Indians downed the champions, 15 to 2, as Wesley Ferrell turned in his tenth victory of the season. George Walberg, usually the nemesis of the Cleveland batters, was no puzzle and before the game was over he had been driven to the showers and Eddie Rommel called to his rescue.

The Senators took the White Sox into camp, 6 to 3, when Ad Liska held Chicago to four hits. The victory left the Senators only a half-game out of second place.

At St. Louis Rip Collins and Milton Gaston staged an old fashioned hurling duel as the Browns defeated the Red Sox, 1 to 0, in eleven innings.

In contrast, Detroit and the New York Yankees put on a modern game of baseball—slamming the ball to every corner of the field as the Yankees won, 10 to 9. A total of 27 hits were collected by both teams.

In the National League, Adolfo Luque, a veteran of many a major league game, lost his first contest of the 1930 season when the Cincinnati Reds pounded out a 8 to 5 triumph over the Brooklyn Robins.

CUBS BEAT PHILS

The Chicago Cubs managed to nose out the Phillies, 7 to 5, in a see-saw contest. Gabby Hartnett, Cubs' catcher, pounded out two home runs to lead the attack, while Chuck Klein, the leading National League hitter, hit safely in his twenty-second consecutive game.

Rained out for two days, the Cardinals and Braves finally came together with the latter winning, 9 to 8, in 10 innings.

Southpaw Bill Walker turned in his eighth victory of the season when the Giants trounced the Pirates, 7 to 2, in the last game of the series. Walker held the Pirates to six scattered hits and drove in two with a timely single.

Triangular Regatta On Lake Carnegie

PRINCETON, N. J., June 14.—(INS.) — California, Navy and Princeton were to clash here today in the last middle-distance race on Lake Carnegie this season.

California's last appearance here, in 1921, saw the Tiger crew set the present course record for the mile and three quarters, 8:53 4-5.

SHARKEY'S LOW LEFT ENDS TITLE BID

REICKS LOSE TO LIFERS

Reick-McJunkin's hopes of checking the rush toward the first half title in the C. & I. League of the Reliance Life team was crushed under the heavy attack of the Insurance bats last evening, the Lifers winning by a score of 16 to 2 and virtually clinching first half honors.

In a second C. & I. League fray, Carnegie Steel won over the Dravo nine, 5 to 3.

Pleasant Valley nosed out the J. L. Thomas nine in the City League, 5 to 3, and W. O. W. sprang a surprise by defeating the leaders, Book Shoe, 4 to 2.

Homewood won over North Bessemer, 13 to 1, in the West Penn loop; Verona defeated Edgewood, 7 to 1, in the Greater Pittsburgh circuit; Duquesne Light defeated Equitable Gas, 5 to 4, in the Philadelphia Company League and in the Major League, Iroquois won over Mt. Lebanon, 10 to 8. The Lincoln Civics defeated the Allegheny Collegians, 7 to 6, in the Central League.

The Homestead Grays defeated the Royal Giants, of Brooklyn, N. Y., 8 to 1, last evening, and will battle the same team in a double-header at Forbes Field today.

Etna Furnitures won over the Homestead Aces, 9 to 6, in an independent tidbit and Dormont downed the North Side Civics, 3 to 2, in another.

JACOBS REAL HEAVY CHAMP, KECK SAYS

York's best referee, who probably would have been in there but for the Miami fiasco, last February, was spied sitting just outside the press section.

"You ought to be in there," one of the scribes said to him. "It's too bad that Miami thing ruined things for you."

Crowley made a worse botch a few hours later. He lacked both the appearance and actions of a man cut out to handle such an important assignment, and let matters get completely out of his hands.

VACILLATING CAUSE

This writer is not so sure that the old rule of letting the referee be the main gazaboo in the ring is not the best. There were few such fiascos in the old days. Then a referee called a foul promptly when he saw one, and, when he did not see an alleged low punch, he proceeded to count over the fallen man. Had Crowley acted quickly one way or the other in the emergency, instead of running from one judge to the other and arguing with the seconds, the sad scene of Thursday night would have been averted. It is the old story that he who hesitates is lost. Vacillating on the part of any official is wrong. That's why baseball umpires make their decisions without hesitation. They may be right and they may be wrong, but the play never gets out of control. If they were to fans would be on them, even if they were right ultimaly.

A GOOFY IDEA

A movement now is on to withhold the championship from Schmeling because of the fact that he was badly beaten and won on a fluke. That is hardly fair. It had been announced in advance that this was to be a championship fight and the public paid almost three-quarters of a million dollars to sit on the coronation of a new world heavyweight champion. The thing has been messed up, but the sportsmanship they are crowing about relative to the award of the fight to Schmeling would be a hollow mockery if there were any such strings attached to it as the thought of refusing to recognize his titular status now.

FOULS PURSUE SHARKEY

Fouls long have been the bane of Sharkey's existence. Back in his early days in Boston he claimed a foul or two and the word got around that he was a "claimer." He lived this down with his flashy work up to the time he was matched with Jack Dempsey in New York three years ago. During the training period for that bout the late Leo P. Flynn, then handling Dempsey's affairs, set up a hue and cry that Sharkey would claim a foul if Dempsey hit him in the stomach.

In the seventh round, Dempsey struck Sharkey low not once but THREE times in a row in a clinch. Fully as many people sitting on that side of the ring saw this bit of deliberate fouling as saw the unintentional blow landed on Schmeling Thursday night. Yet, because of this propaganda of Flynn, Sharkey's claim was laughed down and when he dropped his hands and turned to appeal to the referee Dempsey knocked him down with a left hook to the jaw and he was counted out with his arms wrapped about his pain-wracked body.

MAKES A DIFFERENCE

Sharkey has not claimed a foul since that night, but in his last two bouts both Phil Scott and Max Schmeling have claimed fouls on him. Scott almost got away with it and Schmeling did. It seems it's all right for Sharkey's foes to claim fouls on him, but he needn't look for sympathy when he is struck low.

Can you imagine what would have happened if the unpopular Sharkey, craving the applause and understanding of the fans, had been in Schmeling's shoes and claimed a foul the other night? Can you sketch a picture of the erstwhile sailor man getting away with it? If you can you have a wonderful imagination.

GOB'S MASTERPIECE

The pity about Sharkey's defeat in this bout was that he was boxing one of his greatest battles. It was a masterpiece of execution. He had steeled himself against going wild, and yet—it wasn't to be.

GUS WILSON SPEAKS

Sitting next to me in some other writer's chair in the press section until the holder of the ticket for the seat came along was Gus Wilson, famous former trainer of Georges Carpentier and Jack Dempsey. Sharkey prepared for the Schmeling fight at Wilson's camp at Orangeburg, N. Y.

I asked Gus what he thought of the main bout as the preliminaries were under way.

"Max is not yet ready for such an important bout," he said. "I know him well. I first met him four years ago when I was touring Germany with Dempsey. Max was a raw novice at the time and worked out with Jack. You can't make a heavyweight champion in four years. And the layoff of a year hasn't helped him. He should have fought at least once or twice since his Paulino fight."

Gus had the right dope. Against Sharkey's shiftiness and clean scoring, Max was completely lost. He didn't look one-tenth as good as he did in beating Paulino, and he wasn't overly impressive that night.

VETERANS ON SCENE

Two veterans handled boxers in the early preliminaries. Old Tom O'Rourke was behind Piet Brand, the Hollander, who was stopped by Ralph Ficucuello in the opener, and Joe Jeannette, the old Negro heavyweight star, who was a great rival of Sam Langford and Sam Vey and others in his time and fought many long-distance bouts, was in the corner of Stanley Poreda, of Jersey City, who defeated Raoul Bianchi, of South America, in the second bout. Poreda is a good-looking youngster. They say he made Schmeling look bad in training camp bouts, Jeannette now is rather portly, but carries himself well.

Henry LaMar, of Washington, demonstrated that he is a fine boxer for a heavyweight in beating Matso Osa, of Spain, in eight rounds, but he lacks a punch and the crowd tired of the affair. The bout between Al Fay, of Charleroi, and George Hoffman, of New York, put on after the main bout, was the most keenly-contested battle of the night, and don't let anyone tell you that this Fay fellow isn't a fine prospect. He won handily once he got going and several times had Hoffman on the verge of a knockout.

RINGSIDE SIDELIGHTS

The parade of boxers who wanted to be introduced was rather funny. First Al Singer was given a knockdown to the crowd and he received an ovation. Then came a flock of heavies. Victorio Campolo and Young Stribling both challenged the winner and Johnny Risko and Tuffy Griffiths had a tough time making the grade. They encountered difficulty getting around to one of the corners with steps leading up to the roped square and were almost too late as Joe Humphries tried to rush through the preliminaries to the big scrap.

One-eyed Connelly crashed the gate, but didn't see much of the show, being shunted farther and farther back by the police. The bouts were over before he got down to the press row, where he likes to be at these affairs.

Field Club Birthday Celebrated Today

The fifteenth anniversary of the Pittsburgh Field Club is being celebrated there today—it marks the completion of the club's fifteenth year at the Aspinwall site. A feature of the celebration today will be a special tournament in which all former presidents of the club will be honored.

Former presidents and members only will be permitted to play, trophies to be awarded for low gross and low net, at 18 holes medal under full handicap.

OAKMONT ACE, LAPPAN WIN

The largest one-day tournament of the season of the Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania was staged at the Pittsburgh Field Club yesterday and the popular Oakmont star, Emilie Roseburgh, Western Pennsylvania champion, came through with a splendid score of 89-8-81 to take the honors for the day.

The fact that her handicap was slightly higher enabled her to beat out the former titleholder, Annemette Hunter, of the same club, who registered a neat 89-5-84 to rank second. They were the only two players in the entire field who broke 90 on the Pittsburgh Field Club's beautiful layout. Mary Kuhn was third with 86 and Barbara Warmcastle fourth with 94-8-86.

The big invitation tournament at the Nemacolin Country Club came to a close yesterday with one of the most interesting final rounds seen on local links. The final had a splendid anti-climax when the two club-mates, Knox M. Young, Jr., and Samuel M. Parks, Jr., of Highland, battled for the right to compete for the crown. Young staging a rally to beat out his friendly enemy. In the final, however, Young found the going exceedingly rough, and lost to Kames Lappan, of the Pittsburgh Field Club, 2 and 1. Lappan eliminated Jock Graham, of South Hills, in the other semi-final match by 4 and 2.

CHAMP AT WARNER

evenly matched, with the Heights aggregation boasting slight superiority in the lower numbers. Mt. Lebanon and Westinghouse likewise shape up with little to choose between them, though the advantage of playing at home will lie with the Mountmen.

SECTION II CARD CUT

The defection of Philadelphia Company from league competition reduces the Section II slate to four frays, only one of which brings pace-setters together. The most promising clash is the Washington Heights-Westinghouse. Seconds debate at Westinghouse.

Alpha Kappa Psi is coming along nicely and should slip Minnetonka a warm melee at Verona. Edgewood Seconds and Canonsburg seem to be about a toss-up, but College Avenue looks too strong at the top for West Penn Power.

P. T. A. authorities are seeking to fill the vacant Philadelphia Company franchise with either Wilkinsburg Tennis Club or a Mount Lebanon secondary host. Arrangements are being made for a test meeting between the applicants to decide the right to play out the Utilities schedule.

LIBRARY TEAM WINS

In an unfinished P. T. A. Inter-Club League contest, Sam Keller's Duquesne Library squad led College Avenue, 5-3, on the latter's courts. Aber, Reber, and Bullion starred for the Librarians, with Austin Famariss, southpaw ace, taking East End honors. The summary:

Singles—Bullion, Duquesne Library, defeated Pierce, College Avenue, 6-3, 6-2; Famariss, College Avenue, defeated Kellner, Duquesne Library, 6-3, 2-6, 7-5; Aber, Duquesne Library, defeated Rawlings, College Avenue, 6-4, 6-4; Reber, Duquesne Library, defeated Cassi, College Avenue, 6-4, 6-3; Famariss and Bullion, Duquesne Library, defeated Taylor, College Avenue, 6-3, 6-1; Reber, Duquesne Library, defeated Cramer, College Avenue, 6-4, 6-3. Doubles—Famariss and Kellner, College Avenue, defeated Aber and Reber, Duquesne Library, 6-3, 6-4; Aber and Reber, Duquesne Library, defeated Moore and Tiers, College Avenue, 6-3, 6-4.

Jacobs to Play For Title Today

BALTIMORE, June 14.—(AP.)—Eddie Jacobs and Stanley Almquist will battle today for the Maryland state singles tennis title, each having won his way to the finals, the latter over Eddie's brother, Billy Jacobs, on the courts of the Baltimore Country Club.

Eddie, whose home is in Baltimore but who plays under the colors of the University of Pittsburgh, had little trouble in reaching the finals, disposing of George Holloway, of Yale, 6-1 and 6-1.

Almquist had more trouble with Billy and more than once was in trouble during the match, which he won 6-3 and 6-3.

CADDIES MEET JUNIOR TEST AT ALCOMA

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

The weather may be so torrid that your bathing suit is more comfortable than your clothes—but, like the well-known snowball, the sphere that represents the third annual Western Pennsylvania junior amateur golf tourney for the William Randolph Hearst Trophy, to be held under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, at the Schenley Park municipal links, on Monday, July 7, is growing larger and larger as it rolls along.

Yesterday the first of the club caddie teams to play for the beautiful plaque in the event were qualified at the Alcoma Country Club with Caddie Master Jim Bruno assisting the Golf Tournament Editor in the work.

UNIVERSAL LAD LOW

More than 125 lads tried their turn at the game, playing an 18-hole qualifying round, and it was the honor of the medalist, Thomas (better known as Tony) Barkovich, a 16-year-old caddie from Universal, Pa., to be the only one in the field to break 80—Tony getting a 79. Joe Malay, also of Universal, with his 83; Henry Rakoski, of North Bessemer, and Louis Kumer, of Universal, each with 84, were the other boys to make the grade for the club's championship team.

The other four boys who qualified for the tournament, but who will not play in the team competition, were Dan Orlic and Albert Demshar, both of Universal, who had 85s; Mike Ristway, of North Bessemer, who had 86, and Vencil Nemic, of Universal, who had 87.

Caddie-master Paul E. (Toots) Erath and Professional Jimmy O'Donnell, of the Edgewood Country Club, are working every string possible so that their boys may be qualified soon, as are Butch Kaiser at Highland, Harry Zimmerman at Wildwood, Stanley at Shannopin and others.

OPEN TO ALL

Remember—this is not solely a caddie tournament, regardless of the fact that the caddies are having their preliminary qualifying test. The event is open to all amateur golfers 19 years of age and under, who are not attending an institution of learning above preparatory school grades—which includes caddies 17 years of age and under.

Which school will be the first to present the personnel of its team for the high and preparatory school trophy? This inaugural competition of this year's tourney is expected to be a real battle—and the more schools the better. Schools of the immediate Pittsburgh district are not the only ones eligible to enter teams—schools from any section of the section known as the Tri-state district will be received with open arms.

FOUR ON TEAM

The teams are to be composed of four players each, no member more than 19 years of age—and there is no preliminary qualifying round for school teams. If your school physical director, or coach hasn't lined you up already—why not have the spunk to go ahead and organize a team among the other fellows at your school whom you know to be golfers.

It doesn't cost anyone a sou to enter this big tourney—all we ask is that you provide your own clubs and balls and appear at the starting tee on time and ready to abide by the rules of the game.

16 TO START IN ALTOONA AUTO RACE TODAY

ARNOLD GETS POLE POSITION FOR GRIND

By JESS CARVER,
Staff Correspondent.

ALTOONA, Pa., June 14. — Philosophically resigned to whatever Fate may decree for their portion of the day's fortunes, 16 of the country's best automobile race drivers will crouch behind the wheels of their burnished steeds this afternoon and roar and thunder around the mile board track of the Altoona Speedway in the 200-mile Flag Day grind.

Over the 200-mile course, which, like all other race tracks, has felt the hand of Death before, these drivers will vie for the honor and glory that comes from sticking behind the wheel of a vibrating, roaring, whizzing racing car, powered by the best engines automotive skill has been able to devise, and mindful that the least false turn or twist, the least sickening skid, may result in a smash-up and the end of the trail.

16 TO START

The drivers flaunted superstition yesterday as they qualified for today's race. Two of them, Billy Arnold, who won the Memorial Day classic at Indianapolis, and Russ Snowberger, made the grade Thursday and did not have to risk driving on unlucky Friday the Thirteenth. The other 14 successfully got over the 100-miles-or-better qualifying speed hurdle without mishap. Chet Gardner, driving a Buckeye Special, registering the best time, 117.8 miles per hour.

Arnold, who will be well on his way to the A. A. A. championship for the year if he wins today's grind, draws the pole position, having qualified Thursday with a mark of 122.3 miles an hour. He'll line up in the front line along with Gardner, and will pilot the same Miller-Hertz Special he won with at Indianapolis. Spider Matlock will be Arnold's mechanic and Clyde Terry will be seated along side Gardner.

STAR DRIVERS ENTERED

Babe Stapp, Johnny Seymour as mechanic and Ernie Triplett, with Bert Williams, will roll into the second line. The third pair of drivers will be Wilbur Shaw and Deacon Litz; fourth will be Shorty Cantlon and Mel Keneely; fifth, Frank Farmer and Russ Snowberger; sixth Lou Moore and Jimmy Gleason; seventh Zeke Myer and Chet Miller and eighth and last, Lou Schneider and Speed Gardner.

So fast have been the qualifying times and so promising the make-up of the starting field that a new record for 200 miles is not without the range of possibility.

The local speedway was built in 1923, the year that single seat racing cars were introduced. Today's event will be the first in which cars with both driver and mechanic will compete.

A prize list totaling $18,000 has been hung up.

SPEEDY MAY WINS SIXTH

Making it her sixth win at the Brideville Kennel Club's speedway, Speedy May, Carl Johnston's ever-consistent little brindle, won the feature event of a good program last night. May, as usual, was overlooked by the talent and refunded $14.40 for each $2 contribution. Midnite Meadows set a sizzling pace from the start but could not withstand the winner's challenge in a driving stretch duel.

Another arrival from Ireland, Paunchon Diver, will make his first start in the United States tonight at the New Kensington track. He goes in the second race and like his kennel mate, Dice Box, probably will capture his initial race. These dogs raced at Belfast, Dice Box winning seven in a row and setting a track record.

The feature race is the seventh and matches Alloon, Spindle Top, Bootlegger, His Shadow, Blended, Double Chance, Demuth and Bingo Boy.

15 TO START IN RICH RACE

CHICAGO, June 14.—(AP.)—Fourteen speedy 3-year-olds have been named to start in the $50,000 American Derby at Washington Park today with no outstanding favorite in the list unless it be Gallant Knight, second to Gallant Fox in the Kentucky Derby.

The field for the one and one-quarter mile race includes five invaders from the East—Snow Flake, Dark Sea, Ned O, Hornpipe and Xenofol, and two extremely doubtful starters, Flyer and General Jackson. Tannery, Gallant Knight, Michigan Boy, Plucky Play, Reveille Boy, Portmanteau and Alcibiades, all Western hopefuls, complete the field.

Gallant Knight, Bernard B. Jones' winner of the Fairmount Derby and runner-up in the Kentucky Derby, appears to be the probable choice if the track is fast, while Michigan Boy, winner of the Louisiana Derby, may receive support if the track is heavy.

The field with jockeys and probable odds:

Horse.	Jockey.	Odds.
Port Manteau, J. Parmelee.		50 to 1

PRO SOCCER FOUGHT BY AMATEURS

By TOM BIRKS,
Staff Correspondent.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 14.—Two sessions with little action marked the second day of the United States Soccer Football Association's annual convention here yesterday. Many open battles started, but most of them were tabled until today.

Many new delegates arrived yesterday morning and while no changes are being contemplated among the officers, there appears to be an undercurrent of opinion going the rounds that Armstrong Patterson will not get another term as president.

The big fight as usual was against the professional element, and the die-hards with the amateur spirit certainly make things tough for the professional. Delegates from the Middle West and New York state want to cut in on all gate receipts to the extent of 2½ per cent.

VIBERG PRESENT

Adolph Viberg, representing the New York Nationals Soccer Club, and the American Soccer League, attended the conclave but was not permitted to speak on the floor. The official act of taking the outlaws back into organized soccer was postponed until today.

The Benick case came before the delegates in the afternoon session. Joe Fogarty, of Detroit, tried hard to get the national body to pay the Gallatin center forward's hospital bill, but nothing was done about it.

The first act of the day was to send a telegram to the United States soccer team sailing for South America, wishing it God speed and luck on its tour.

Gossip indicated that the Professional League lost $200,000 last year. Bethlehem Steel team has disbanded and Pittsburgh soccer fans might be interested to know that Johnny Jaap, former Pittsburgh boy, has signed with Preston North End in England and will sail soon. This is the club that wanted Buff Donnelli.

A big session faces the delegates today and some surprises may come with the election of officers. In the evening a banquet, given by the Eastern Pennsylvania Football Association and the New Jersey state body, will be the feature.

AFTER REFEREES

It is surprising the number of shots the delegates are taking at the referees' body. Peter Gilgane, the president of the whistle handlers, will not be a candidate for re-election. A move was made late in the day to get Davy Gould, of Philadelphia, to run, but Gould declined. Pat Connor, of Pittsburgh, may get the nomination. A new secretary also will be elected.

School and junior soccer devotees staged a fight. The committee spent $1,600 in a promotion stunt, but the way the money was spent on trophies and medals did not meet with the delegates' approval.

Sam Parks, of Pittsburgh, who is alternate delegate for Washington, is trying to bring the 1931 convention to Pittsburgh, and seeing that no one has put in a bid as yet, there is a chance that the Steel City will entertain the moguls of soccer next year.

Rule changes will be discussed today, and Peter Gilgane has suggested paying the chairman of the commission or council a yearly salary of $4,500, although he failed to say how the money was to be raised.

BUCS, PHILLIES CLASH TWICE

took the measure of our boys. Larry French swapped punches cleverly until the fourth when Walker, himself, delivered a hit that put the Giants three runs in front. Forbes Field patrons will remember Walker as the same southpaw who nicked Larry for a four-run homer when the Giants were in Pittsburgh some time ago.

French weakened again in the seventh when the Giants rang up three more counters to salt the contest away. The game was devoid of the customary homers, yet the New York batters were able to make enough hits to reach the desired goal.

The Giants, by the way, are pounding along at a furious rate in the hope of overtaking the Cubs and Robins. They are set to open an important series with the Cubs this afternoon.

GOLF
As Champions Play It

When the ball lies on top of the sand in a trap near the green, and the slope of the bunker is not very steep, is it better to blast the ball out with an explosion shot, taking sand, or to play the ball against the slope with a straight-faced club and let it kick over onto the green?

When the ball lies on top of the sand in a trap near the green, and the slope of the bunker is not very steep, I think it is best to blast the ball out with a niblick, taking plenty of sand. It is a much sounder and easier way, especially when the green is narrow with a trap on the other side. You can stop the ball very quickly with an explosion shot while a shot hit against the bank with a straight-faced club has a lot of overspin and will sometimes run over the green, getting into trouble all over again!

Some practice will be needed to "get" the "explosion shot" correctly, but after it is learned it usually stays with a player even when his other shots are going poorly.

the Browns, seven out of 11 from the Tigers, seven out of 12 from the White Sox, and six out of eight from the Red Sox.

IN ENGLAND THEY'RE still making a big fuss over Ted Phelps for his success in winning the professional sculling championship of the world from Bert Barry. Phelps is a hero wherever he goes and is being feted by admirers in every district visited in celebration of his victory. There isn't much left of professional rowing. The present enthusiasm in England recalls the days when there was a similar feeling in this country, with the Pittsburgh district as one of the centers, over the achievements of Ed Hanlan, John Teemer, Jake Gaudaur, Jim Riley, Charley Courtney, Eph Morris, George Hosmer, Plaisted, Lutter, Coulter, Hamm, Ross and other famous oarsmen. But the pro game faded, and it's a thing of the past as far as the United States is concerned. Only England and Australia are keeping it alive, and it isn't often that they can work up a title race even in those countries. Championship competition doesn't promise to be overly keen for sometime, judging from the fact that in their recent race the new champion beat Barry by the unusual margin of 35 lengths in two miles.

Ted Phelps.

WES FERRELL, young Cleveland right-hand pitcher, who won 21 games last year in his first full season as a major leaguer, yesterday became the first hurler in the big show to win 10 games in 1930. He has lost four. Ted Lyons, of the White Sox, is his closest rival, with nine victories; Bill Walker, Charley Root and Harry Seibold have won eight each.

Adolfo Luque, veteran Cuban slabman with the Dodgers, yesterday suffered his first defeat of the season after winning six games in a row. His old Cincinnati team-mates administered the trimming. The only hurlers who have pitched more than one game to a decision and remain undefeated are Mel Harder, of the Indians, and Lee Roy Mahaffey, of the A's, who have won five and four games, respectively.

HARD-SOFT LARGE-SMALL CORNS

Magic Oxygen Salts Bath Never Fails.
No More Burning, Aching Feet.

No matter how many corns you have or how painful they are—soak your feet for 15 minutes in a delightfully soothing and revitalizing Radox foot-bath for 3 or 4 nights—then lift corns and callouses right out, roots and all, and they won't come back either unless you wear shoes again which aggravate your feet.

No cutting or digging is required, because Radox liberates oxygen, which softens hard outer layers of corns, each night penetrating the pores further and further, carrying the salts right to roots of corns, which are so loosened they can be lifted out bodily.

Your feet are made strong—healthy—vigorous—hard skin on heels and toes goes also.

Mayflower Drug Stores and all good drug stores are stocked with Radox—if they aren't, insist upon them ordering it if you want to experience great foot-joy and comfort.

DAILY TRUE STORY

They called him "Takealetter" Jones.

That was because of his habit, with every stenographer, of jabbing the buzzer until the girl appeared and then saying, all in one run-in sharp word, after the manner of Floyd Gibbons announcing:

"Takealetter!"

He was never discourteous nor yet noticeably courteous but he was surely curt with his office staff.

Stenographers came and went came and went. Either they were supersensitive and thought that Jones disliked them or else they were the hopeful type hopeful that this good-looking boss would fall in love with them and, sensing that they might just as well expect the Prince of Wales to cable a proposal, they resigned for newer and more hopeful pastures.

Mary Oliphant lasted three years. She didn't mind the curtness of Mr. Jones nor yearn to become Mrs. Jones. She was efficient and quiet, and when Jones jabbed the buzzer with staccato stabs and said "Takealetter!" she sat right down and took the letter.

One morning she broke her rule of speaking to Mr. Jones when he buzzed the buzzer for her.

She said, "I'm leaving in three weeks. I am going to be married, Mr. Jones."

"Yes?" said Jones, and then, "All right, take a letter."

She took the letter and, having a sense of humor, told this on herself in the outer office and joined in the laugh.

But when she said her good-by to Mr. Jones on her last day with him he handed her a plain white envelope.

Then Olive Came

"Don't know why good stenographers get married," he said, "but as long as you think you want to marry I hope you get a good man."

"Thank you, Mr. Jones—and I hope you get a good stenographer."

"Fluffies?" Mary's face reddened a little.

"Yes—the sort of clothes a girl thinks she has to have when she gets married—you deserve it."

Mary blinked away some tears and thanked him demurely. She didn't know that he wasted five full minutes after she left, staring into space and scowling as he pondered on the matter of matrimony.

Two stenographers came—and went after brief, mutually unsatisfactory periods.

No one told her about Jones. The outer office enjoyed watching a new stenographer answer her first call and waiting to see the dazed expression on her face when she came out.

Olive Parmenter had been engaged by Williston, the office manager. She had never seen Mr. Jones.

That is, she had never seen him until he passed through the outer office, like a gusty breeze, and enter his private office.

"For me?" Olive asked.

Olive marched into Mr. Jones' office with notebook and pencils. Jones gave her one swift glance, saw, without emotion, that she was a new girl, and said:

"Takealetter."

"Shoot," said Olive sweetly, sitting down.

Jones shot her another glance and frowned. He didn't care for fresh or flippant stenographers. He dictated—he dictated rapidly. Olive's pencil hopped and skipped along with the pot-hooks.

Salary Raised

Jones was talking at the telephone.

As soon as Jones finished telephoning he read the letters.

They were neat. There were no misspelled words, no signs of erasures and, modern miracle, they were correctly punctuated.

Olive came in.

"This letter to Kline Company, I said 'Yours of the seventeenth,' you have it 'eighteenth.'"

"Yes, sir, you said seventeenth, but I thought it was a mistake because the seventeenth was a Sunday, so I looked it up in the files. It was the eighteenth—any other changes?"

"No, thanks."

Jones grinned.

He was that sort of a man, a good sport and a square shooter.

By the time Olive Parmenter had worked for him six months he gave her a substantial raise in salary.

The following Monday when he said "Takealetter" he paused and added, "Cashier treat you all right, Saturday?"

"Yes, Mr. Jones—there's a note of thanks there, on the corner of your blotter."

"'S all right." He said and dictated his letter. After she had gone he read her brief note, which was:

Well, I'm a son-of-a-gun." Jones muttered. Once more he laughed as he thought it over. She was giving him good service. She wasn't dumb, of course she knew she was giving good service.

Olive never day-dreamed about her work, but she gave much thought to Mr. Jones. She was beginning to like him in more than a business office way. She was about ready to wager that underneath his business energy he was very real, a wholesome, big-hearted, secretly romantic man who would make some girl mighty happy if she happened to be the right sort of girl. Olive knew by this time that she was just the right sort of a girl. She also knew she didn't have any more chance of making "Takealetter" Jones see this than she had of being her country's first woman President.

Sees Photo

There were no personal photographs in Jones' office that Olive or anyone else had seen until one day she went to his desk drawer to get his checkbook to send over to his club, per his telephoned request.

There was a small photograph in an expensive Italian leather frame. Olive studied it.

Olive had been there two years when she saw "the" girl. She answered Jones' buzzer and there sat the girl of the photograph. Evidently she had entered by the private door to the corridor.

Not by the flicker of an eyelash did Olive give any sign that she knew the girl was there. Jones said nothing. Why should he? Why should he introduce his beloved to his stenographer?

"Take a letter," said Jones.

Olive took five letters. The girl sat there in silence, and Olive felt that she was watching her quite a lot.

"Wants to see if I'm a dangerous rival," Olive thought.

"'S all," said Jones.

Olive went out and typed her letters. She made a couple of mistakes in her first letter, discovered them herself, rewrote the letter and got a brace on herself. She wasn't the sort to go jump in the river because her boss had a sweetheart.

She didn't have a showdown, not a Chinaman's chance, she told herself, so that was that. She had a good job, her salary had been increased three times, she was saving money and not overworking and she knew she should than't whatever proper gods there were to thank for this good fortune.

Olive broke an appointment to go out with a chap she didn't care two pins for. She sat by the window in her room, where by craning one's neck almost a foot wide view of the Hudson could be seen, but she wasn't watching the strip of river, she wasn't seeing anything at all. She was enjoying an evening of heartbreak. She had to indulge herself that much. Then she would buck up and forget it.

About a week later, when Jones said his usual "Takealetter," he gave her 10 in succession.

Proposal by Note

"'S all," he said. And then, "No, get a personal letter. Type it on my personal stationery."

Olive sat down again. She had never typed a personal letter for Mr. Garvice W. Jones. This might be interesting. It was. His first word was:

"Dearest."

"Salutation—put it down—Dearest, as you know, I am a busy man and not much of a social animal. However, I have fallen deeply and sincerely in love with you. This is a proposal of marriage. Will you give me a prompt decision?

"Adoringly."

"Address?"

That night when she got to her cozy little one-room-and-kitchenette apartment she found a box of roses and with them a letter which read:

"Dearest: As you know, I am am a busy man," etc., etc.

The next morning Mr. Jones found a typed letter on his desk which read:

"Dearest—As you know, I am a busy woman with no opportunity to demonstrate my true feelings toward you. Your esteemed favor of even date enables me to express my sentiments. I accept your proposal of marriage if you are free to propose—if the girl of the leather-framed photograph, whom I once saw in your office, has no prior claim on you.

"Doubly adoringly,

"Olive Parmenter."

When the buzzer zzz-ed a little later Jones didn't say "Takealetter"; he said, "Olive, that girl is my sister. She wanted to come in and see the sort of a girl I told her I had fallen in love with. She approves of you, which is nice, although her disapproval wouldn't have prevented the proposal. I'm going to kiss you."

"Shoot," said Olive.

The morning's exercise will consist of reading over the following item from a Portland, Oregon, daily ten times—

Prohibition Agent Moon and 10 gallons of moonshine were found in a car parked just outside an asserted bootlegging establishment when Patrolman O'Halloran and squad raided the place.

Agent Moon's explanation was that he was working on a "big" case which required delivery of liquor, presumably for purposes of entrapment. He was delivering liquor, he was quoted as saying, but he was not taking money for it.

Uncle Sam wants to know how many morons there are in this country, and the following simple test has been arranged to facilitate the gathering of this information. Above you see a picture of the Masked Baritone who will sing over various radio stations at frequent intervals for some time to come. Watch carefully, and when you recognize her voice take your watch and see how long a time elapses before you dial her out. If this lapse of time is more than five seconds, write your name on a piece of paper and send it to the U. S. Census Bureau, Moron Tabulation Division, Washington, D. C.

"I'm just an order of scrambled brains and beauty," warbles Moronia just before you get up and let her fall to the floor with a loud crash.

Vote Fraud Investigation Promised by Prosecutor

District Attorney Andrew T. Park has spoken a needed word in promising to investigate the disappearance of a voters' check list reported stolen from the recount board.

The statement is all the more welcome because efforts to obtain enlightenment from those in position to discuss the matter authoritatively have been futile.

For reasons which he did not see fit to disclose, Judge James R. Macfarlane, official head of the recount board, has repeatedly refused to give out the news. While not lacking faith in Judge Macfarlane, the public naturally has been puzzled by his attitude.

It is charged that fraud was committed in the primary election in the First District of the Second Ward—that 550 ballots were placed in the box, but only 532 persons voted—and that the list of persons who voted was subsequently stolen from the recount board.

Though our courts have tended to give an opposite impression, by the leniency with which they have often dealt with convicted election crooks, cheating at the polls is a crime of a peculiarly reprehensible nature. While an ordinary theft of property affects the public at large only indirectly, the stealing of an election is a direct offense against all the voters. It is no wonder, then, that the people have been eager to know what their employes, the constituted authorities, intend to do about the Sixth Ward case, and that the silence of Judge Macfarlane, spokesman for the recount board, has caused comment.

District Attorney Park's statement that the theft of the voters' check list will not prevent prosecution of the ballot box stuffers is gratifying. He has four witnesses who will testify to the number of persons who voted.

The stealing of the list is, of course, the more spectacular crime, because it was purloined from the very body that was supposed to guard against fraud.

But the casting of the fraudulent votes was the chief offense.

Nice Baby

But a Long Way Off.

IT OUGHT TO BE BORN, SWEET THING, BUT——

Briand, intelligent French Minister of Foreign Affairs, would like a "United States of Europe," something like the United States of America.

A postoffice, that for two cents will take a letter from an old lady living in the southern part of Florida for her health to her son hunting gold in the northern extremity of Alaska for his wealth.

A United States of Europe would be magnificent, IF the baby could live and thrive.

This cunning little creature OUGHT to be born.

But consider the conflict of languages. In Russia alone 30 different languages are spoken.

How will the inhabitants of Turkey, the Balkans, Germany, Sweden, Norway, Holland, build up a government that could control them all?

The Montreal Daily Star prints this picture to express a HOPE rather than an EXPECTATION.

Unfortunately for the beautiful plans of Mr. Briand, nations and organizations of nations, like babies, are literally BORN, not planned and built up out of men's imaginations.

The United States was not invented—it grew.

Men have tried to invent languages that everybody could speak, as Briand and some others are trying to invent a United States of Europe.

But, for the present, that will not come true. The pretty little baby will remain in the great unknown.

The British Empire wouldn't join such an organization; it has a British "United States" of its own scattered over the globe.

Russia would not join. She has a plan to substitute her Communist theories for all so-called "capitalistic government." Holland or Denmark would not want to be the "Rhode Island" of the United States of Europe. Each of them prefers to keep her own identity.

Some day, a long way off, perhaps 100,000 years, more probably 500,000 years, men will stop their fighting, their cheating, their struggling.

EMULATION will replace COMPETITION.

The human race will be homogeneous, all one color, one language, one idea, to advance the truth, help the weak, and be worthy of this beautiful planet.

Meanwhile, we must struggle along and take care of our own.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Punishment for Freedom

Germany meets its treasury deficit for the fiscal year, which ends at no time, by slapping an extra 10 per cent tax on bachelors.

"Bugs" Baer

There seems to be an undercurrent of resentment against bachelors the world over. It is very rarely that a bachelor is elected to the White House. And it is very rarely that one leaves it.

Employers seem to think that married men are more honest than single cavaliers.

As a matter of fact, every time a man is arrested for putting the switch on the firm's dough, he always says, "I did it for the wife and kiddies."

Your expert bachelor is happy at all weddings save his own. His married friends like to invite him home to dinner. Not because they like him particularly, but in family quarrels all married men like to bring along their own referees.

A bachelor lives across the airway from us. Every morning he greets the sunrise with the astounding lyrics, "If you were the only girl in the world, that would be one too many for me."

Every time a government pipes a happy citizen it schemes up some repertoire to slap a tax on his lapels.

The Daughters of the American Revolution have almost passed a resolution condemning bachelors. And soon the Senate will put a retaliatory assessment on all single men between the ages of 9 and 90.

We don't know how the government figures out the proper ages for doing things. You must go to school when you're six, you can work when you're 16, get married when you're 18, vote when you're 21, fight for the flag between the ages of 21 and 31, and retire on two flat arches when you are 60.

You can't be President until you are 45 and admirals are tossed into the waste basket at 70, just when they are starting to get smart.

The government will protect fish, birds and bears in Yellowstone Park. But the minute it sees a bachelor it says, "If you don't join the Army what will you tell your grandchildren?"

If the thing is successful in Germany you know right well that it is going to spread like a fat man in a hammock. And we always suspected that the World Court intended to launch a branch court of domestic relations.

Isn't It So?

Being in the right place at the right time isn't always a matter of accident.

STELLAR RADIATION

By Archibald Henderson

The crime of the century is waste!

If science could only salvage all that is wasted in construction, manufacture and industry, the wealth and power of the world would be almost incalculably enhanced.

Consider the energy generated by the falling together of protons and electrons, say in a pound of coal. It has been computed that the annihilation of a pound of coal a week would produce as much energy as the combustion of the five million tons a week mined in the British Isles. A steam engine, we say, has an efficiency of 5 per cent, which assumes complete use of the thermal energy of combustion as 100 per cent efficiency.

As Jeans says, "If we measure the work done against the total intrinsic energy of the fuel, as made available by its complete annihilation, the efficiency is more like 0.00000001 per cent. On this scale the efficiency of the sun and stars is exactly 100.00 per cent."

When an electron is annihilated, it produces a radiation of extremely short wave-length. As this radiation advances through the interior of the star, its wave-length is constantly increased. Gradually growing softer, it finally reaches the stage known as bamma-radiation. Thence it passes to hard X-radiation, then to soft X-radiation—finally emerging from the star as ordinary light and heat.

The radiation set up by the annihilation of an electron out in free space is traversing the universe continually, and we are all subject to its bombardment. In our universe, now assumed to be finite, radiation keeps traveling round and round, like a squirrel in a cage.

Suppose every atom in the universe were suddenly transformed into radiation. What effect would this produce? If the whole universe, apart from the sun, were suddenly to melt into radiation, it would raise the temperature of the earth less than a five-thousandth part of a degree!

It has been computed that if space starts empty of all radiation, the melting away of our present universe would raise the temperature only 11 degrees—or to minus 262 degrees Centigrade, a temperature well below that of liquid air. Calculation further shows, according to Jeans, that the universe will not become saturated with radiation until it reaches a temperature of 7,500,000,000,000 degrees.

At this temperature space would be so full of radiation that it could not include any more. To raise space to this temperature would require the dissolution of a vast number of universes similarly to our own. This vast number would be represented by the numeral 3 followed by 47 ciphers! Says Jeans:

The melting away of the whole of the present universe into radiation is something less than the melting of a single grain of sugar in the Atlantic, and the radiation of the stars is as far from creating new worlds as is the sweetness of a single grain of sugar from turning an ocean into candy.

Thus we see that the capacity of space for radiation is virtually infinite, for all practical purposes. Matter can change into radiation, but radiation cannot change back into matter. Ultimately a time must come when every atom, capable of it, will have dissolved into radiation. This will register the end of the universe.

And there's the sly, snoopy Meanie who seems all sugar on the surface but is, in reality, just about as healthy to have around as a typhoid carrier.

Meanies—there are a thousand varieties, but they're all a pain in the neck. What makes 'em? How do they get that way?

A Meanie gets that way because he has a grudge against life. Life, according to the Meanie, has done him dirt. Everyone else is luckier than he is. Everyone else has an easier time. Everyone else is more popular. And the Meanie has an insatiable desire to be popular. He longs, with a gnawing hunger, to be admired—to be powerful—to grab spotlights and sway destinies. And the thought that other men are doing these things and he isn't burns him up.

So he determines to outsmart life. Willy-nilly he'll get the attention he craves! And he gets it by being a pain in the neck. Which isn't such dumb reasoning as you might suspect. For a Sulker can command as much attention as a Solomon, and a Martyr has it all over Mussolini when it comes to running 'em ragged.

Why is a Meanie? That's why. And it might be well to take these words as a warning. For the facts which turned Jones into a Meanie may also turn you into one—if you don't watch your steps. Few Meanies are born that way. They get that way when they're backed into a corner. Grief may back a man into a corner. So may sickness or shock or injustice or disappointment or loss. It's hard to get out of a corner when you're once backed in. It's hard to put envy and shame and hurt behind you. It's easier to make a weapon of your grievance . . . easier far to be a Meanie than a Man.

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

There's a town in Missouri where the high-toned folks all go to the Episcopal church and the rest mostly goes to the Methodist and Baptist churches. The Episcopal church is small, and there ain't but one of it, but there's several of the others.

Well, one day a lady called on the pastor of a Baptist church and says: "Say, parson, I wonder if you'd mind coming to our house to see my husband. He's pretty sick, and he'd kinda like to talk to a minister. He gets lonesome for a good old hymn or something. He ain't a bad sort, and he goes to church regular when he's well."

"Sure," he says, "I'll go right up with you now. So your husband is a church member? Are you, too?"

"Oh, yes, I always go."

"Ain't it funny," says the minister, as they was getting near the house, "I don't seem to remember ever seeing you at church at all."

"No," she says, "I reckon not. We go to the Episcopal church. We both got awful good families back East. But, you see, I couldn't ask our own minister to come to the house now, because there's only one Episcopal minister in town, and my husband's got the smallpox."

The Rhyming Optimist

In the Courtyard

Here, in the courtyard cool;
Goldfish play in the pool.
It might be an old-world patio
Of a castle in Aragon,
This, where the tulip boughs bend low
And the water gleams in the sun.

Perhaps, should we pass through the lofty rooms
We might find a glamorous city blooms,
Perhaps we might hear the tinkling note
Of a softly-strummed guitar,

But why dream of the charm that distance lends,
The lure of the long ago?
When love's bright blossoms blow
Here in the courtyard for you and me,
Where the fountain lifts its spray,
Where soft winds sing through the tulip-tree

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS

In Collaboration With

Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

But as a matter of fact, nothing of the sort occurs. Whichever way the selection was made, the average remained the same, generation after generation.

These results can only be interpreted in one way—that the variations in size seen among the beans of a single plant have, in these experiments, nothing to do with heredity. Their origin must be sought in the conditions to which they were exposed during their formation.

The position of the bean within the pod; the position of the pod upon the branch; the position of the branch upon the main stem; the amount of light received by the branch—these and other factors will each of them exert an influence upon the size of individual beans.

H. G. Wells.

When all the separate conditions happen to be favorable, the bean will be exceptionally large; when all are unfavorable, exceptionally small. But neither the help nor the hindrance has had any effect upon the actual constitution within.

When the bean is sown, it is its interior constitution which asserts itself, not the accidental excess or defect of its weight; and the new plant develops as do all other plants of that particular constitution.

Its inner destiny was not altered by its own good or bad fortune or by the favorable or unfavorable conditions in which its parents lived.

In addition to the variations in size among the beans on a single plant, or on all the plants of one and the same strain grown in the same plot during one season, the average size for different seasons may vary, and also the average size for beans of the same strain grown under different conditions of cultivation.

But these differences, too, when the same accurate methods are applied to them, reveal themselves as non-inheritable.

Here are environmental variations due to the outside influences acting on the plant: they have nothing to do with heredity. Warmth, light, moisture and so on are moulding the individual plant and the individual bean without having any effect on the germ-plasm within it.

In the first place, many different pure lines, each with its own characteristic average seed-weight, were distinguished. Plants of different pure lines were grown side by side under identical conditions and yet they would continue to produce beans of different average weight.

Commercial lots of beans will consist of the produce of a number of pure lines mixed together; accordingly, if we start with an ordinary bean-field, and start selecting for seed-weight, using, let us say, the heaviest 5 per cent of beans produced in each generation as the parents of the next, we shall raise the average seed-weight of our stock rapidly.

It is clear that the size of any single bean will depend upon the interplay of two tendencies, the inner and outer. Its own chromosomes will be at work, tending to make it grow to the family size. The amount of sunlight and warmth and moisture to which it is exposed will have a modifying, controlling effect. And its final size will be a resultant, a balance of the two sets of influences.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 14.—New York for a brief period after the war threatened to surpass London as a male fashion center, but lately there has been a marked decadence in dandyism, Mayor Walker ballooned temporary interest in fancy dressing that sagged with the passing of James Huneker, but it was very brief.

Men are still buying expensive clothes, but they express mauve motifs instead of sartorial surprises. Tie racks are hung with plain, drab colors. A fancy vest no longer graces even a race track tout, and a pearl gray derby has not been sighted since Raymond Hitchcock's passing.

The blue serge suit which was almost outmoded by the more fashionable grays, browns and even deep purples has again—along with plain black—become the reigning set of threads. Striped shirts and collars to match, the legacy of a detestable fashion period have given way to single and extremely sedate single tones.

New York at the moment—12:01 a. m. daylight saving—hasn't an outstanding dandy—a dandy that might be mentioned along with Kyrle Bellew, John Drew, Robert Hilliard or the famed elegante, E. Berry Wall, with his 300 suits and 500 hats. There are gaudy dressers, but no aristocratic dandies.

Many style experts blame the apathy to the sudden interest of gigolos, bootleggers, racketeers and gunmen in flashy raiment. When the East Side gorilla moved out of his cellar dive to the ringside table of Broadway supper clubs wearing a Tuxedo, something happened.

The well-dressed man began to lose interest in flamboyant habiliments. And not even the immaculate Grover Whalen with his dove-colored spats, silk hat and lapel nosegay could provide a proper afflatus. Metropolitan sweildom is on pronounced strike.

In other days a foppish dandy, such as Oscar Wilde, was a gentleman of parts—a philosopher. Today he is more than likely to talk out of the side of his mouth, prison fashion. A cynic once suggested that to see smart New York dressers visit the morning police lineup of crooks.

* * *

A gloomy gentleman dropped into a chop house the other midnight and purposely upset a salt shaker, cracked a mirror with his cane and began to whistle at a table with his hat on. "I'm already licked," he said, "and I've always wanted to razz a few superstitions."

* * *

Writers who grow discouraged when first efforts fail to land may be encouraged by the experience of the famous novelist, Joseph Hergesheimer. He wrote six years before publishing a word. Somerset Maugham finished four novels before marketing a line.

* * *

Now that the wound has healed, there is no denying Fred Stone was disconsolate over the reception of his seasonal offering called "Ripples." It lasted seven weeks on Broadway. Stage doctors declared if Stone had bowed to the popular demand for offcolor lines and risque situations he would not have been forced to go on tour. "If I have to resort to smut," he said, "I'll give up grease paint."

Stone took his show to Boston and has had one of the most successful runs that city ever knew.

* * *

Stone happens to be financially secure. He is one of the three richest American actors. Among his holdings is the Pullman building—a New York skyscraper.

* * *

David Warfield has long been reputed the richest American actor. Out of the profits of "The Music Master," he invested in uptown real estate which trebled and re-trebled in value. And is still trebling.

* * *

Frequently New Yorkers see her in one of those up-in-the-air autos of the vintage of '18. The chauffeur's uniform is moth eaten and she sits with Queen Mary erectness in the back seat, gazing not at but through the crowds. She is one of the richest women in town. And the stingiest.

* * *

I fell for a new-fangled face massage in a barber shop the other morning and was repeatedly told to relax, which I did. The charge was $5. It was upon receiving the check that I gave up relaxing and grew as taut as a fiddle string.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

If you had your life to live over again do you think you could better it?

If you could start with your present knowledge, possibly you might.

As you have passed from one period to another you have realized that you have missed or passed up opportunities for greater accomplishment.

In many cases you might have created opportunities but you did not make the effort.

It would take hard work, close application and attention to make them fruitful and you were not willing to sacrifice—at that time.

You were reluctant to change your mode of living, indifferent toward fitting yourself for something better and if you were given another chance to live your life over again you probably would not do any better.

Added knowledge would only emphasize the fact that your personal efforts must be expended without thought of personal comfort if you would shine at the top.

Until you can put success ahead of self you won't gain eminence and since that means a complete change of heart, if you won't change your principles now there is serious reason to believe that you would live things over any better.

But at least be a good sport and don't cry you might do better if given another chance, for you wouldn't.
